MURDERS GENOAN; COMMITS SUICIDE

Thomas Cornwell Kills Curtis Smith and Then Inhalates Chloroform

Had Been Brooding Over Failure of Business Ventures—Strangled Smith After Beating Him

Brooding because of financial reverses and thoughts of a possible foreclosure of the mortgage on his home, Thomas Cornwell, sixty-seven, of Genoa beat and strangled to death his wife's uncle, Curtis Smith, sixty-nine, and then committed suicide by taking chloroform late Saturday night.

The bodies were found in bedrooms in the Cornwell home, where Curtis had resided for the past few years, Sunday morning about seven o'clock by Edwin Cornwell and his mother, Edwin finding the father and his mother the Uncle.

A note left by Cornwell read as follows:

"Goodbye All: I have committed an act of mercy. Neither one of us is of no more value. Take the insurance money and save the place. Edwin be good to mother. Goodbye."

Since his shoe repair shop burned a few years ago, Cornwell has had a series of financial reverses that, according to testimony taken, had affected his mind. He continually brooded over the mortgage that was on their home and became despondent as one after another of his business ventures failed.

Saturday night about 10:30 o'clock Cornwell came upstairs, closed his son's door and apparently went to bed, the only odd part being that he never closed the bedroom door before. This was passed off by the son as an eccentric idea of the father and nothing more was thought about the incident until the next morning when neither of the two men responded to the breakfast call. Edwin immediately went upstairs and shook his father who failed to respond to the entreaties. He jerked back the covers and a coat that was thrown over the head disclosing the lifeless body with a bottle of chloroform in one hand and cotton in the other.

A loud call brought the mother way up the stairs, far enough so that she could see into the room of her uncle, and sensing that he had committed the same act, called Dr. Austin. Upon his arrival, he immediately summoned the coroner of DeKalb county. A jury was formed and, after careful investigation, found that Curtis Smith had been beaten with the pendulum of a clock across the forehead and nose and one mark on the hand showed that he had put up a struggle against the half crazed man and then was strangled to death. The coroner's jury verdict was:

"Curtis Smith came to his death by strangulation at the hands of Thomas Cornwell, deceased." Thomas Cornwell came to his death by inhalation of chloroform.

That suicide had been uppermost in Cornwell's mind for a number of days is evidenced by the fact that he chloroformed a cat about three days before his death in order to see how the medicine worked.

Cornwell carried about $2000 insurance and Smith had a pocket-book containing $31.03.

Funeral services were held at the undertaking rooms of W. W. Cooper Tuesday afternoon; Rev. Robeson officiating.

Obituary

Thomas Cornwell was born in Staffordshire, England, September 8, 1855 and died in Genoa, Ill., October 21, 1922. He came with his father to the United States in 1862, settling in Illinois and soon after went to Salt Lake City where he spent twelve years. Leaving Salt Lake, he traveled to California where he resided a number of years. While in that state he was united in marriage to Gertrude Smith. In the year 1910 he returned to Illinois, settling at Hampshire and thence moving to Genoa.

To this union were born six children, three of whom are living. They are James B., Leona and Edwin.

CORN SHOW AT DEKALB

New Kind of Exhibition is Planned for Barb City

Plans are being laid for a corn show to be held in DeKalb some time during the month of January.

The object of this show is to eliminate the use of seed corn infested with corn root diseases and to familiarize farmers with the types to be free from infection.

The following score card with explanations has been adopted by the Illinois Corn Growers' Association as the practical means of showing people how to select disease corn. This table may help you in selecting a show type of utility.

There will probably be a boys' class and a mens' class so that the contest will be open to both the farmer and his son.

A meeting will be called at the DeKalb County Soil Improvement Association office some time in the near future to formulate definite classes and plans for conducting this show. Officials would like to get in touch with any corn breeder or farmer who is interested in this work.

Select your seed corn now and lay aside the outstanding ears so that you may have a goodly number to choose from for your final selection.

ARREST DANCE DISTURBERS

Three Young Men Who Created Disturbance at Coral Inn to Face Court

Drunkenness and disorderly conduct will not be tolerated at Coral Inn dance hall, where semi-weekly dances have been held throughout the summer. Mr. and Mrs. Bowers, proprietors of the popular dance pavilion have made this plain.

Mr. Bowers entered a complaint with State's Attorney V. S. Lumley against three young men, charging them with creating a disturbance at Coral Inn a week ago Wednesday evening while a dance was in progress.

It is said the young men were refused admittance because they were intoxicated and that they accordingly made themselves obnoxious by rattling the doors, pounding on the windows and otherwise disturbing the dancers. The three young men, Walter Behnke, Herman Schauers and William Miller of Union were arrested by Sheriff Stewart on a charge of disorderly conduct and released on $300 bail each, pending their appearance in court at a later date.—Marengo Republican.

FIND JOKER IN BOSS BILL

A joker in the enabling act may rob Illinois service men of their $50,000,000. This became a possibility last Friday when the joker was discovered in the bill passed by the general assembly to permit the voters to approve or disapprove the proposition to pay the Illinois ex-service men and women a bonus.

The enabling act specifically states that the proposition must receive a majority of votes as provided in Sec. 18, Art. 4 of the constitution. This section provides such propositions must receive a majority of all votes cast for members of the general assembly and not for the proposition.

died in Genoa October 21, 1922. When a small boy he moved with his parents to Wisconsin where he spent most of his life. About ten years ago he came to Hampshire and made his home in that vicinity, engaging in the occupation of farming. NOTES FROM THE COURT HOUSE

Grand Jury Completed Before Judge

Slusser—Inspect County Jail

YOUTHS COMMIT BOLD BURGLARY

Sheriff Decker Has Sent Word Throughout the Country for Apprehension of the Criminals

Judge Mazzini Slusser convened the October term of the Circuit court on Monday. The grand jury consisting of the following was impaneled: D. J. Shepardson, Paw Paw; David Todd, S. Shabbona; O. T. Berg, Milan; Terry McCabe, Maia; George Gillis, South Grove; A. Gritzbaugh, Franklin; Levi Olson, Victor; Royal Davis, Clinton; F. W. Case, Afton; F. O. Grego, O. P. Painter and Earl H. Hunt, DeKalb; C. S. Townsend, Mayfield; F. D. Arbuckle, Kingston; J. N. Antoine, Somonauk; E. C. Mason and R. C. Coy, Sandwich; Fred C. Schmidt, Squaw Grove; H. S. Denton, Pierce; C. F. Noble Cortland; M. F. Gross and Frank W. Stark, Sycamore, and James R. Furr, Genoa. J. Antoine was selected as foreman. After being instructed in their various duties by Judge Slusser the jury departed to inspect the county jail.

The Mechanics Lien proceedings instituted some time ago in the circuit court by the Standard Foundry company of Sycamore against Katherine Burchfield and David R. Burchfield was settled and the matter was dismissed by order of Judge Slusser.

M. W. Boland obtained a judgment by confession before Judge Slusser for $1,036 and costs against Edward F. Boland of DeKalb. The action was based on a judgment note executed by the defendant on June 13, 1922, for $1,000, due 90 days after date, in payment of which default had been made.

Warrants charging burglary and larceny were issued by State's Attorney Poust for the arrest of George Barnes and Joe Marshall, formerly of DeKalb. On account of the burglary it is believed was committed by them they are considered thieves of the lowest order.

One Alexander V. Combs, 58 years of age, residing at the rooming house of William Barnes in DeKalb, on Monday morning about 2 o'clock noticed that a vest in which he had hidden his savings as slowly being removed from under his pillow. Owing to the darkness of the room he could not recognize the person, but he caught hold of the vest and attempted to wrest it from marauder's hands. Being sick and feeble it was an easy matter for the thieves to get the vest away from him and make for the door.

As soon as Combs recovered from the shock he notified his next door roomers, but the thieves were gone, and the vest with all of Combs' savings, some $95, was also gone. The garment was found on the steps; the thieves had dropped it in their flight.

Both the defendants, whose records are bad, were suspected, especially after it was discovered they had seen the old man count his money a few days before.

The DeKalb police authorities, who instituted search for the two men, found that both appeared at the railroad station a few hours later for Indiana, but the train being late they were heard to say that they would take the first street car out of De-

Kalb.

As yet neither of them have been apprehended. A description of Marshall, who is 22 years of age, and Barnes, who is 17 years, was sent out immediately by Sheriff Decker,

and it is believed they will not get very far before they are arrested.

HUNLEY MAY LOSE PLANT

Victor May Co. May Close Branch Unless Assured 40,000 lbs. Daily

The Victor May company of Chicago, which buys milk of nearly a hundred farmers in the vicinity of Huntley, may close its plant there within the next two weeks.

Victor May has notified the Milk Producers' Co-Operative Marketing company, through which he buys milk at Huntley, that unless 40,000 pounds daily can be obtained, it will buy its milk somewhere else.

About 30,000 pounds are now being shipped to Chicago daily by Victor May, who operates routes in Chicago. This amount, he declares is 10,000 pounds less than he has demand for.

Farmers at Huntley have had two places to take their milk in the past—the May plant and the Jelke company.

The situation at Huntley reveals the tragedy of the Chicago milk distri-

SERVE DELICIOUS DINNER

M. E. Ladies' Aid Society Clears $180 on Bazaar and Dinner Saturday

Those fortunate people who attended the chicken dinner given by the Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. church are still licking their chops. Everything was cooked to a queen's taste and no one went away hungry.

In fact it was the other way, a trifl too much and the boys all felt tight under the belts.

The beautiful hand work at the bazaar stands was sold before 3 o'clock.

The ladies deserved a successful day for the work they had put in and that they succeeded beyond their fondest hopes is evidenced by the above receipts.

BIG ATTRACTION NEXT WEEK

At the Princess Theatre, DeKalb, Ill.

"The Prisoner of Zenda"

Notice picture patrons who look for exceptional photoplays will have an opportunity all next week to see a picture which is one of the outstanding pictures of all times. For during that week Rex Ingram's "The Prisoner of Zenda" will be presented at the Princess theatre, DeKalb.

It is a story with dramatic action full of intrigue, romance and excitement. It is the most popular romance of a generation. In the hands of a director such as Rex Ingram who made "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," "The Prisoner of Zenda" has stepped out of the pages of the book and come very much to life on the screen. As great a cast of players as have ever appeared in any picture are included in this big special feature.

Among them are Lewis Stone, Alice Terry, Robert Edeson, Stuart Holmes, Ramon Navarro and Lois Lee.

Some idea of the big $100,000 play will be found in the following:

total cost of the picture was $1,118,453.16. It took 28,000 people, actors, technical men, etc. to make this great picture possible. 26 costume designers and other artists gave four months' time to the creation of costumes. In the costume factory 540 people were employed, tailors, cutters, dressmakers, etc. —during the two weeks in which the coronation scene was taken, 10,000 persons were housed and fed on the grounds—at one time there were 432 cooks on "The Prisoner of Zenda" pay roll. We could tell you scores of other items that go to make this an attraction worth going miles and miles to see. But we would like to remind you of the importance of not missing it.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

British Tories Quit Coalition and Lloyd George and His Cabinet Resign.

BONAR LAW TO BE PREMIER

America's Attempt to Dry Up the Seas Meets With Various Kinds of Opposition—Doings of the American Legion Convention.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PRESIDENT HARDING. In a letter addressed to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, to be read at a Republican meeting, said: "Agricultural production is very nearly restored, taking the world as a whole; but agricultural prices are so low that it is apparent to all of us that the farmer is not being compensated." Asserting that the administration has done all in its power to restore the balance between prices and costs of production, he said the trend is "strongly toward better conditions for the farmer."

"Do you and the farmers of your acquaintance agree in this with President Harding?"

COALITION government in Great Britain has gone to smash. Lloyd George has resigned as prime minister and his entire cabinet is out. A Bonar Law has been asked by the king to form a new conservative ministry. Lloyd George has promptly begun a fight to regain power as chief of a new party. The British are entering on the most exciting political contest they have had for many years. A call for a general election is expected shortly.

The downfall of the coalition ministry was brought about when the conservative—otherwise tory or unionist—members of parliament and of the cabinet, in caucus at the Carlton club, decided their party should go to the country as an independent party, and, if elected, choose a conservative premier. This action was taken against the protests of Austen Chamberlain, their leader, and in accordance with the advice of A. Bonar Law, hitherto a staunch supporter of Lloyd George. It was precipitated by an election in Wales which was won, surprisingly, by the conservative candidate.

At this writing it is not certain that Bonar Law will attempt to form a ministry, but he probably will do so, and it is taken for granted that all its members will be conservatives except Lord Grey, who will be offered the post of minister for foreign affairs. The life of this ministry undoubtedly will be short.

As is said above, Lloyd George has not quit the fight. He delivered a hot speech at Leeds Saturday and made it plain that he won't "take his punishment lying down." He has the nucleus of a new and strong party in such conservative leaders as Lord Baldwin, Austen Chamberlain, Lord Birkenhead, Worthington Evans and others who have stood by him in this crisis. It will be a party of moderation and may be called the center or national party.

UNCLE SAM in the role of prohibition enforcer is not having things all his own way on the seas. Federal Judge Learned Hand in New York, after hearing arguments in the suit brought by foreign and American shipping companies to enjoin the United States government from enforcing the ruling of Attorney General Daugherty, reserved his decision and extended the temporary restraining order. The British government has rejected the proposal of Secretary Hughes for a treaty to extend the right of search of vessels up to twelve miles off shore, and has formally protested against the seizure by our dry navy of a Canadian schooner eight miles off the New Jersey coast. France, Holland, Italy, and perhaps other countries, are only awaiting the necessity of contesting the right of the United States to enforce a ruling that will mean either that their seamen will be deprived of the daily allotment of wine guaranteed them by their laws or that their vessels must refrain from entering American waters.

In addition to these embarrassments, the government is being told that the trade of our insular possessions, especially the Philippines and Porto Rico, will suffer greatly if foreign vessels carrying liquor are barred from entering their ports. Secretary of War Weeks is especially insistent on this point, and it is said to be likely the government will follow his suggestion and ask congress speedily to revise the Volstead act so that the ruling of the attorney general may be modified.

Mr. Hughes' note to Great Britain, suggesting extension of the right of search dealt especially with liquor-smuggling operations. In reply, Ambassador Geddes said his government was doing and would do all it could to prevent such smuggling, but that it has consistently opposed any extension of the limit of territorial waters and "do not feel that they can properly acquiesce, in order to meet a temporary emergency, in the abandonment of a principle to which they attach great importance."

THOUSANDS of former service men stand concerning the coming Near East peace conference. The soviet government says if it is not represented in that conference any results of it will be of no effect, and it especially protests against its exclusion if Rumania and Jugoslavia participate. Russia supports fully all the Turkish claims on frontiers and for sovereign rights on the coasts of the straits, opposes any control of the straits by the League of Nations or by mandate, and declares for absolute freedom of commerce in the straits.

Large numbers of the refugees from Thrace, chiefly Armenians, entered Bulgaria the early part of last week, and on Thursday the Bulgarian frontier was closed to them. Half a million of the fugitives are in Macedonia, lacking shelter, food and clothing. French troops in considerable numbers are arriving in Thrace to preserve order, and in some places, notably Adrianople, a big part of their task is to prevent the Greeks from burning the city and slaughtering the Moslems before they depart.

PREMIER FACTA of Italy apparently has successfully withstood the demands of the Fascisti that he and his cabinet resign. The ministry refused to yield and Facta made an unexpected showing of strength. Benito Mussolini, leader of the Fascisti, was so impressed with this that it was said he would instruct his followers, at their great gathering in Naples this week, to refrain from causing the government any more trouble. Gabriele D'Annunzio, the soldier-poet, has signed an agreement with Mussolini establishing common action between their forces.

PORTLAND, ORE., doesn't propose to be pestered by "wobblies." Learning that thousands of members of the Industrial Workers of the World were gathering there to participate in the waterfront strike, the city council appropriated funds for a lot of extra police and the mayor ordered immediate raids. Between two and three hundred men were arrested and held on charges of vagrancy. It was said the I. W. W. plans contemplated the swarming of 25,000 members of the organization to Portland and other Pacific coast points.

On Wednesday the boys had their parole, and it was a big one. Some thousand of them were in line, and they had 25 military bands, 23 drum corps, lots of tanks and floats and flags and standards, while above them circled two squadrons of airplanes and many seaplanes.

General Pershing arrived in New Orleans on Thursday and was given a rousing welcome. It was said he was particularly pleased with the report of the military affairs committee, adopted by the convention, calling for the drafting of industry and labor in the event of war.

One of the distinguished guests of the convention was to have been Col. C. R. Forbes, director of the federal veterans' bureau. He went with his staff, but departed almost at once, because, according to report, the supporters of one of the candidates for the position of national commander charged that he was sent there by President Harding to play politics. COURT UPHOLDS BAN ON LIQUOR

Government, However, Will Go Slow in Enforcing the Order.

APPEAL IS TO BE TAKEN

U. S. Not to Be Unreasonable in View of Complications That Might Arise —Will Await High Court's Ruling.

Washington, Oct. 24.—The decision of Federal Judge Hand in New York dismissing the application of representatives of foreign and domestic shipping interests for an injunction against the government to prevent it from enforcing the Volstead law means that the new regulations carrying into effect the recent opinion of Attorney General Daugherty will be formulated and put into effect at once.

The regulations are being completed in the office of Prohibition Commissioner Hayes and will be ready for the action of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon when he returns to Washington.

"In view of the great importance of this question and the various features involved, we are not going to be unreasonable in the enforcement of the regulations soon to be issued," said Major Hayes.

"Everyone realizes that so far as foreign shipping is concerned there may be many complications as the result of the enforcement of the provisions of the attorney general.

"Therefore, until the Supreme Court of the United States has an opportunity to decide the case, nothing will be done by the prohibition enforcement officials to embarrass the government in any way in dealing with the question of liquors on foreign ships coming within the three-mile limit of the territorial waters of the United States."

Have You Ordered Your COAL?

If not

It would be a wise thing to order your coal at once in order to insure future delivery of a sufficient amount to last through the winter. VENEER QUICKLY WORE OFF

Habits of Civilization Almost Imme diately Forgotten When Indian Chil dren Returned to Tepees.

When General Hancock opened his campaign in the Indian spring of 1887 he was waited on at the outset by some Cheyenne chiefs and asked to hold a council. Among other matters brought up for readjustment was that of two Indian children, supposed to be survivors of the Chivington massacre at Sand Creek, Col. Taken as waifs by the government, they were placed in homes and educated. Because of their extreme youth it seemed an easy task to eradicate the "Injun" and bring them up in the white man's road.

One of the two, a boy, was taken east. The other, a girl, was placed with a family near Denver. They were dressed and educated according to civilized standards. Then their people demanded that they be returned. The government had promised by treaty to return such, and the boy and girl, eight or nine years of age, were ordered back to their people.

To all outward appearances, including habits and mannerisms, the two were like any white children. When delivered to their people they showed no desire to quit the white man's road. Inside of a year's residence with the Indians the two lost their veneer, had forgotten, or at least claimed to have forgotten, all knowledge of the English language, and were quick to avoid contact with the whites. The blood of the wild claimed its own.—Adventure Magazine.

MARK LOVERS' RESTING PLACE

Pretty Indian Legend Concerning Trees of Somewhat Peculiar Growth at Athens, Tennessee.

About a century and a quarter ago near where Athens, Tenn., now stands, lived a Cherokee chief and his beautiful Indian daughter, Nicolula Kowena. She was betrothed to a young chief of her tribe when a white youth came into the village, met her, won her love and succeeded in getting her to break her betrothal to the Indian brave and promise to marry her white lover, relates the Ladies' Home Journal. The disappointment fired the heart of the discarded Indian suitor with a spirit of revenge. Watching his opportunity, he stole upon the two lovers when they were seated on a fallen log in a secluded spot and plunged his knife into the heart of the white man who had robbed him of his sweetheart.

But Nicolula Kowena, rendered frantic by the death of her lover, seized the knife, plunged it into her own breast and fell dying across his feet. Later their bodies were found and buried where they fell. According to the tribal custom in burying the unmarried, a twig of a forest tree and its fruit was placed in one hand of each.

Today there are two large trees with roots and branches interlocked—one a large black oak and the other a hickory—the two aged trees with their mingled roots and branches which, legend says, sprang from the hands of the two forest lovers of long ago.

Manners of the Married.

According to a young man we know one of the most difficult duties for a bachelor to accomplish is to pass a week end in the home of married friends. When he was questioned as to the particular form of torture, he gave the following list of invincible discomforts attendant upon such a visit:

They ask you to admire impossible children.

They both talk at once, on the same or different subjects.

They take you for motor rides and quarrel about the routes.

The baby invariably cries before breakfast.

They ask a pretty girl to meet you who hasn't a spoonful of brains.

They talk about themselves and never give you a chance.

Frequently the cook has just left and you have to wash dishes.

They persist in talking old times that you long to forget.

They say you ought to be married and they're "just the right girl."

They're glad when you've gone and you're glad to go.—Putnam Patriot.

Ask the Clerk—He Knows!

Last winter an association of college professors held a convention at one of the Chicago hotels. In one of their meetings the discussion waxed warm and they finally decided to settle the disputed point by referring to the encyclopedia. Two of them went down to the desk to ask the clerk if a copy of the much-needed book was available.

"May I inquire if you have an encyclopedia?" said one of the professors, looking benevolently over his glasses. "No, I am sorry we do not."—solicitously—"what is it you want to know?"—Saturday Evening Post.

Dog Intelligence.

In England a short time ago, says an exchange, a medal was awarded a Great Dane for saving his master's life. A roaring, deafening wind was blowing, and the man was walking along a dark Cheshire road with his head down.

The dog was some distance behind, but presently he came up at racing speed, took a jump at his master, and sent his sprawling into the hedge. The dog himself could not escape the bonnet of the car which, but for his intervention, would have killed his master, and was badly injured.

Great Reservoirs of India.
For conserving her water supply there are to be found in India tremendous artificial lakes. At Diebar, in the Rajputana province, for instance, there is a reservoir with a superficial area of 21 square miles; the masonry dam measuring over 300 yards in length and 32 yards in height. In southern India, too, there are several reservoirs over 12 square miles in area.

Marriage a la Mode.

It is well known in the South seas is so simple and not complicated by social or financial pressure; otherwise, their young married set would have a difficult time, for the average age of the bride is twelve and that of the bridegroom seventeen. Usually the woman does the proposing and the man waits to be chosen.

Embalmed Bodies as Medicine.

Six or seven hundred years ago our doctors held firmly to the belief that there was great medicinal value in ground mummies, and many a nasty dose given ailing youngsters contained bits of the embalmed body of a man or woman who may have known Joseph, or seen the miracles of Moses.

Marriage a la Mode.

In a paper presented to the British association, attention was invited to the great advantage that was gained by the first animals which succeeded in securing thermal and chemical constancy in their environment, thus rendering themselves independent of changes in the external medium. Man is the most remarkable for his activity in this respect, but many other creatures differ from him only in the degree of their activity directed to a similar end, and it should be added, in some parts of this country the activity of the beaver in creating an artificial environment has, until lately, been more marked than that of man himself.

Modern Styles in Ancient Crete.

The frescoes on the palace walls at Knossos, many of which are beautifully preserved, fully bear out our high estimate of the ancient Cretans. The women have low-necked bodices and richly flounced skirts reaching to the ground, and both men and women seem to have worn something in the nature of corsets. At all events the wasp-waist is the ordinary type. "Why, we are Parisians," a Frenchman exclaimed in astonishment when he was taken to see these pictures, which were, he was told, at least 3,500 years old.—J. McCabe in "The Evolution of Civilization."

Keeping Your Money Busy

A FRIEND OF YOURS sold some property. He had no immediate use for the money, but he wanted to keep it all together until opportunity came to invest it wisely.

We advised him to take a Certificate of Deposit. This pays him a nice profit while he waits. His money is safe—it is busy—it is where he can put his hands on it quickly when needed.

The "C. of D." is an excellent method of keeping money together and busy when it is not otherwise invested. And it is an excellent plan to have some money always handy in case of special need.

We issue certificates at any time and for any amount.

Be sure to get Swamp-Root and start treatment at once.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

American Manners Different.

The Englishman, the Frenchman and the American all think each other extremely bad mannered. The Frenchman respects the manners of the Englishman and tolerates the crudities of the American. The Englishman has a contempt for the manners of both the French and the American, and the American comes to Europe humbly thinking that his manners are probably the worst and willing to learn, only to find that they are as good as the French or English manners, but very different.—Milwaukee Journal.

Surprised to Find Her-

Taunton, Mass.—"I used to have pains in my back and legs so badly, with other troubles that women sometimes have, that my doctor ordered me to stay in bed a week in every month. It didn't do me much good, soon day after talking with a friend who took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for about the same trouble I had, I thought I would try it also. I find that I can work in the laundry all through the time and do my housework too. Last month I was so surprised at myself to be up and around and feeling so good while before I used to feel completely lifeless. I have told some of the girls who work with me and have such troubles to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I tell them how it has helped me. You can use my testimonial for the good of others."—Mrs. BLANCHE SILVIA, 69 Grant St., Taunton, Mass.

Just like that she interrupted, and she looked so shocked. Then she began to walk again, up and down, up and down. Then, all of a sudden, she flung herself on the couch and began to cry and sob as if her heart would break. And when I tried to comfort her, I only seemed to make it worse, for she threw her arms around me and cried:

"Oh, my darling, my darling, don't you see how dreadful it is, how dreadful it is?"

And then it is when she began to talk some more about being married, and unmarry as we were. She held me close again and began to sob and cry.

"Oh, my darling, don't you see how dreadful it is—all how unnatural it is for us to live—this way? And for you—you poor child!—what could be worse for you? And here I am, jealous—jealous of your own father, for fear you'll love him better than you do!

"Oh, I know I ought not to say all this to you—I know I ought not to. But I can't help it. I want you! I want you every minute; but I have to give you up—six whole months of every year I have to give you up to him. And he's your father, Marie. And he's a good man. I know he's a good man. I know it all the better now since I've seen—other men. And I ought to tell you to love him. But I'm so afraid—you'll love him better than you do me, and want to leave me. And I can't give you up! I can't give you up!"

Then I tried to tell her, of course, that she wouldn't have to give me up, and that I loved her a whole lot better than I did Father. But even that didn't comfort her, 'cause she said I ought to love him. That he was lonely and needed me. He needed me just as much as she needed me, and maybe more. And then she went on again about how unnatural and awful it was to live the way we were living. And she called herself a wicked woman that she'd ever allowed things to get to such a pass. And she said she could only have her life to live over again she'd do so differently—oh, so differently.

Then she began to cry again, and I couldn't do a thing with her; and, of course, that worked me all up and I began to cry.

She stopped then, right off short, and wiped her eyes fiercely with her wet ball of handkerchief. And she asked what was she thinking of, and didn't she know any better than to talk like this to me. Then she said, "I can't go for a ride."

And we did.

And all the rest of that day Mother was so gay and lively you'd think she didn't know how to cry.

Now, wasn't that funny?

Of course, I shall answer Father's letter right away, but I haven't the faintest idea what to say.

ONE WEEK LATER

I answered it—Father's letter. I mean—yesterday, and it's gone now. But I had an awful time over it. I just didn't know what in the world to say. I'd start out all right, and I'd think I was going to get along beautifully. Then, all of a sudden, it would come over me, what I was doing—writing a letter to my father! And I could imagine just how he'd look when he got it, all stern and dignified, sitting in his chair with his paper-cutter; and I'd imagine his eyes looking down and reading what I wrote. And when I thought of that, my pen just wouldn't go. The idea of my writing anything my father would want to read!

And so I'd try to think of things that I could write—big things—big things that would interest big men: About the President and our country-ties-of-thee, and the state of the weather and the crops. And so I'd begin:

"Dear Father: I take my pen in hand to inform you that—"

Then I'd stop and think and think, and chew my pen-handle. Then I'd put down something. But it was awful, and I knew it was awful. So I'd have to tear it up and begin again.

Three times I did that; then I began to cry. It did seem as if I never could write that letter. Once I thought of asking Mother what to say, and getting her to help me. Then I remembered how she cried and took on and said things when the letter came, and talked about how dreadful and unnatural it all was, and how she was jealous for fear I'd love Father better than I did her. And I was afraid she'd do it again, and so I didn't like to ask her. And so I didn't do it.

Then, after a time, I got out his letter and read it again. And all of a sudden I felt all warm and happy, just as I did when I first got it; and some way I was back with him in the observatory and he was telling me all about the stars. And I forgot all about anything, either.

Of course, there's Father left, and of course, when I go back to Andersonville this summer, there may be something doing there. But I doubt it.

I forgot to say I haven't heard from Father again. I answered his Christmas letter, as I said, and wrote just as nice as I knew how, and told him all he asked me to. But he never answered, nor wrote again. I am disappointed, I'll own up. I thought he would write. I think Mother did, too. She's asked me ever so many times if I hadn't heard from him again. And she always looks so sort of funny when I say no—sort of glad and sorry together, all in one.

ONE WEEK LATER

It's come—Father's letter. It came last night. Oh, it was short, and it didn't say anything about what I wrote. But I was proud of it, just the same. I just guess I was! He didn't get Aunt Jane to write to Mother, as he did before. And then, besides, he must have forgotten his stars long enough to think of me a little—for he remembered about the school, and that I couldn't go there in Andersonville, and so he said I had better stay here till it finished.

And I was so glad to stay! It made me very happy—that letter. It made Mother happy, too. She liked it, and she thought it was very, very kind of Father to be willing to give me up almost three whole months of his six, so I could go to school here. And she said so. She said once to Aunt Hattie that she was almost tempted to write and thank him. But Aunt Hattie said, "Pooh," and it was no more than he ought to do, and that she wouldn't be seen writing to a man who so carefully avoided writing to her. So Mother didn't do it, I guess.

APRIL

Last week I had to have a new party dress, and we found a perfect darling of a pink silk, all gold beads, and gold slippers to match. And I knew I'd look perfectly divine in it; and once Mother would have got it for me. But not this time. She got a horrid white muslin with dots in it, and blue silk sash suitable for a child—for any child.

Of course, I was disappointed, and I suppose I did show it—some. In fact, I'm afraid I showed it a whole lot. Mother didn't say anything then; but on the way home in the car she put her arm around me and said:

"I'm sorry about the pink dress, dear. I knew you wanted it. But it was not suitable at all for you—not until you're older, dear. Mother will have to look out that her little daughter isn't getting to be vain, and too fond of dress."

I knew then, of course, that it was just some more of that self-discipline business.

But Mother never used to say anything about self-discipline.

Is she getting to be like Aunt Jane?

ONE WEEK LATER

She is.

I know she is now.

I'm learning to cook—to cook! And it's Mother that says I must. She told Aunt Hattie—heard her—that she thought every girl should know how to cook and keep house; and that if she had learned those things when she was a girl, her life would have been quite different, she was sure.

I am learning at a domestic science school, and Mother is going with me. I didn't mind so much when she said she'd go, too. And, really, it is quite a lot of fun—really it is. But it is queer—Mother and I going to school together to learn how to make bread and cake and boil potatoes! And, of course, Aunt Hattie laughs at us. But I don't mind. And Mother doesn't, either. But, oh, how Aunt Jane would love it, if she only knew!

MAY

What do you suppose I am learning now? You'd never guess. Stars. Yes, stars! And that is for Father, too.

Mother came into my room one day with a book of Grandfather's under her arm. She said it was a very wonderful work on astronomy, and she was sure I would find it interesting. She said she was going to read it aloud to me an hour a day. And then, when I got to Andersonville and Father talked to me, I'd know something. And he'd be pleased.

And so, for 'most a week now, Mother has read to be an hour a day out of that astronomy book. Then we talk about it. And it is interesting. Mother says it is, too. She says she wishes she'd known something about astronomy when she was a girl; that she's sure it would have made things a whole lot easier and happier all around, when she married Father; for most everybody that comes in looks there right off; and, of course, when they see me they don't hardly ever go on with what they are saying. So it just naturally follows that I don't know something as I used to.

Not that there's much to hear, though. Really, there just isn't anything going on, and things aren't half so lively as they used to be when Mr. Easterbrook was here, and all the rest. They've all stopped coming, now, most. I've about given up ever having love stories of Mother's to put in!

And mine, too. Here I am fifteen next month, going on sixteen. (Why, that brook and river met long ago!) But Mother is getting to be almost as bad as Aunt Jane was about my receiving proper attentions from young men. Oh, she lets me go to places, a little, with the boys at school; but I always have to be chaperoned. And whenever they are going to have a chance to say anything really thrilling with Mother or Aunt Hattie right by my elbow? Echo answers never! So I've about given up that amounting to anything, either.

As Times Change.

"Do you remember the old stories about the boy who went to the great city and came back home just in time to pay off the mortgage on the farm?" "Yes," replied Farmer Corotessi. "It's different now. When a boy leaves the farm the home folks have to hold themselves in readiness to go to town and help him out with his rent and his grocery bill."

STYLE IN FUR GARMENTS;

FANCY HAIR ORNAMENTS

FUR garments, and particularly fur coats, require much discrimination on the part of their makers, who must see to it that the design is in keeping with the character of the fur used. Fine men's patrician wraps—a certain restraint in design, real artist in following the mandates of fashion, sumptuous garments that bespeak refinement. All these things must be kept in mind or the garment will fall short of perfect success and it is not dresses will be rich and sparkling, however simple. They begin with bandaus that are merely wire wound with gold or silver tissue and ornamented with small metallic flowers or fruits at intervals, or adorned with little, fine, milline flowers. Very narrow ribbons with metallic edges and metallic ribbons fashion some of the flowers and make pretty rosettes.

The most popular of bandaus or garlands just now appear to be those easy to forgive failure when such means as fine furs are in the hands of designers.

In the gracious and luxurious coat pictured here there is nothing to criticize. It is made of Persian lamb, with marten collar and cuffs, and reveals original but conservative designing. Appropriating those features of the mode that distinguish it from coats of other seasons, it develops an uneven hem line, with points at the sides, and introduces a new diagonal front opening in which one side crosses over the other below the collar. The sleeves are regulation—large and flaring toward the wrists, finished with marten fur like the collar. The lines are long and slender and its ample collar soft and unusually becoming. Baby carucal and broadtail are furs that are supple enough to lend themselves easily to made of small velvet or metal leaves that call to mind the laurel wreath. Velvet leaves, in orchid, emerald, brown and yellow tones, have their edges outlined with gold or silver paint usually, and the favorites are rose foliage and little ivy leaves. Small heads of wheat, in the same coloring and metalized, are interspersed with the leaves occasionally, suggesting that they are for gray-haired wearers. Emerald green or black velvet ribbon, twisted and finished with a small rosette, bow or ornament, looks particularly well in gray or white hair and brilliant ornaments of onyx and rhinestones are wonderfully well placed against such a charming background.

The popular garland of leaves pictured employs blue and silver tissue pasted to a crinoline foundation for the leaves, and silver paint for the outlines, the making of modish wraps. These include bloused models and box coats, as well as capes. Among the last are cloth capes lined with fur, that seem even more luxuriously warm and cozy than fur coats lined with silk.

Box coats of fur are very smart and they adapt the wide, straight, upstanding collar that looks as if it could fortify, one against any degree of cold. Between voluminous fur collars and sheltering hats, the face is nearly covered with a barricade of headbands in many shapes and colors set with mock jewels will add to the sparkle and glitter of the dressy figure.

Capes and wraps of fur-fabrics are not far behind those of natural furs in richness and warmth. In durability they have the advantage; nothing is more lasting. They are made on the same lines as wraps of natural fur and employ real furs for voluminous collars and cuffs.

Diadems, coronets, bandaus and garlands made to encircle the heads of beauty are all in the running for the coming winter evening gaieties. Bandaus and garlands far in the lead.

Speaking of coiffures, there is a whole new flock of them and they are greatly varied. In many of them the hair, in braids or strands, is wrapped about the head, in nearly all it is loosely waved. At least 50 per cent reveal a high hair dress with puffs and curls sparingly used, and there is also an interpretation of the "early venetian" style with hair parted in the middle and brought down over the ears.

Couplets and wraps of fur-fabrics are not far behind those of natural furs in richness and warmth. In durability they have the advantage; nothing is more lasting. They are made on the same lines as wraps of natural fur and employ real furs for voluminous collars and cuffs.

Eat Your Own Pork

The pork cuts which are usually cured are the hams, shoulders or picnics, and bellies or bacon. For home use these are usually "sugar cured." This may be done either in a brine or dry cure as desired.

A standard recipe for a sweet pickle is 12 pounds of salt, 3 pounds of sugar (either granulated or brown), 2 ounces of saltpeter and 6 gallons of water for 100 pounds of meat. Thoroughly mix the salt, sugar and saltpeter together and rub a coating of it over all the meat and allow it to lay in a cool place over night. Add the remainder of the salt mixture to the water (6 gallons) and allow it to boil. Skim off any scum. Pack the meat as compactly as possible, skin side down, in a stone jar or hard-wood barrel. The top layer of meat should be placed skin side up with a weight upon it. Then pour in the cool brine. Make sure that all the meat is completely covered. For curing meat which is to be kept until the following summer, each piece should remain in the brine four days for each pound it weighs. Meat which is to be eaten during the winter may be given a milder cure by removing it sooner.

Overhaul and repack the meat at the end of the first and again at the end of the second week, using the same brine. If the brine sours or becomes ropey, remove the meat, scrub it thoroughly in warm water, and repack in a clean barrel with fresh brine. A cool cellar, above the freezing temperature is the best place for curing. After curing, remove the meat and allow it to soak for several hours in warm water, and thoroughly scrub it and string for the smokehouse. Hang it in the smokehouse and allow it to dry over night.

A standard recipe for dry cured pork is 5 pounds of salt, two pounds of sugar (granulated, brown or molasses), 2 ounces of saltpeter and pepper to suit the taste for each 100 pounds of meat. Mix the ingredients thoroughly and rub one-third of the mixture into the meat and pack it in a tight box. After three days rub another third of the salt mixture into the meat and repack. After another three days rub in the remainder of the salt mixture and again repack. It should remain there for 12 to 15 days, after which it should be removed, washed and dried as described above. This is not as safe a method as the brine method but the meat has a milder flavor. It works best in a cool, moist cellar.

Mice will do very little damage where the above precautions are taken, but it is well to remove grass, weeds and rubbish from around the trees so they will not be encouraged to build nests close to the trunks.

crease the production of corn from 40 to 50 bushels or of wheat from 20 to 25 bushels per acre.

A good rotation, therefore, makes possible the reduction of costs per acre and consequently per bushel and per ton, as soon as it is adopted. It makes possible a further reduction in the cost per unit of crop grown whenever such rotation results in increased yield. It should be noted especially that increasing the yield per acre as a result of introducing a good rotation, does not necessarily mean increasing the number of bushels of cereal crops produced. The introduction of legume crops into the rotation will reduce by that much the cereal acreage. Until a corresponding increase in the yield of such cereal crops grown occurs, the change would result in a reduction rather than an increase in the total number of bushels of cereal crops grown.

Guard Young Fruit Trees

As soon as cold weather has destroyed the green vegetation upon which mice and rabbits feed, they will be looking elsewhere for succulent food. Young fruit trees are in danger, after these pests have once tasted the juicy bark. One rabbit can girdle a dozen trees in a day unless precautions are taken to prevent it.

Rabbits attack trees that are from one to six years old; mice injure trees of any age. It is better and cheaper to protect the tree trunks this fall than to try to save girdled trees next spring by bridge grafting.

Trees may be protected either by painting the trunks with concentrated lime-sulphur solution or by placing some protector about the trunk. Protectors may be made from poultry wire, building paper, or cornstalks. Patented protectors made of wood veneer or wire may be secured on the market.

Eighteen-inch poultry wire with half-inch mesh is very satisfactory and has the advantage of serving for several years without being removed. Building paper, veneer, and cornstalks serve equally well, but these should be removed in the spring since they afford shelter for wooly aphids, mealy bug and other injurious insects.

Mice will do very little damage where the above precautions are taken, but it is well to remove grass, weeds and rubbish from around the trees so they will not be encouraged to build nests close to the trunks.

Apples for Winter

In seasons when fruit is abundant, as it is this year, many people forget that the supply is likely to disappear before midwinter. Now is the time for farmers to select a supply of sound apples from the late-keeping varieties in the home orchard and pack them away for the winter supply of fruit, sauce and pies. To keep apples successfully, choose varieties suitable for the season—Grimes Golden, Jonathan, Stayman and Delicious for November and December; Rome Beauty, York Imperial, Akin, Yellow Newtown and Baldwin for January; and Ben Davis, Willow Twig and Winesap for February and March. Save only hard, well developed, sound fruit, discarding all wormy, scabby or bruised specimens. Pack apples in barrels or boxes and close the packages. In open containers the fruit shrivels and is exposed to rot-producing spores and bacteria which cause early decay. Apples keep best in cool basements, where the air inclines to be moist. Cemented basements with furnaces are unsatisfactory. Buried in frost-proof pits out of doors, apples often keep very well. Wrapping the individual specimens in newspaper prolongs their season several days, keeps the individual specimens fresh and crisp and prevents the spread of rot through the packages.

Rotation and Cost Reduction

"The unit costs, i.e., the costs per bushel or per ton, of the various crops in a rotation are determined by two factors, the operating expense of the farm and the yields per acre. On corn belt farms from 60 to 80 per cent of the total operating expenses is made up by man and horse labor costs. From 40 to 55 per cent of all man labor is used in the production of crops on such farms. It is evident, therefore, that any reduction which can be made in either of these two items will have an important influence on the cost of growing crops.

A good rotation of crops is the most important factor in reducing the unit costs of man and horse labor, especially horse labor. Such a rotation distributes the man and horse labor used more evenly throughout the cropping season. This is only another way of saying that each man and each horse can grow a larger number of acres of crops with a good rotation than without such a rotation. As the number of acres of crop grown by one man or one horse increases the cost per acre tends to decrease. A good rotation, therefore, tends to decrease the per acre costs of growing crops. This is important even though the yield per acre might not be at once increased as a result of the rotation. It would still be an important factor in decreasing the costs per bushel and per ton of crop grown, because of the reduced cost per acre.

When the rotation results in increasing the yield per acre, which is actually the case where a good rotation follows an extractive system of farming, the cost per unit of crop produced is reduced still further. It is a matter of common knowledge that it does not require 25 per cent more labor to in-

FREEDOM FROM LAXATIVES

Discovery by Scientists Has Replaced Them.

Pills and salts give temporary relief from constipation only at the expense of permanent injury, says an eminent medical authority.

Science has found a newer, better way—a means as simple as Nature itself.

In perfect health a natural lubricant keeps the food waste soft and moving. But when constipation exists this natural lubricant is not sufficient. Medical authorities have found that the gentle lubricating action of Nujol most closely resembles that of Nature's own lubricant. As Nujol is not a laxative it cannot gripe. It is in no sense a medicine. And like pure water it is harmless and pleasant.

Nujol is prescribed by physicians; used in leading hospitals. Get a bottle from your druggist today.—Advertisement.

Abe Jackson (colored) was indicted for stealing money from the station agent of a railroad. As the railroads were then under the control of the government, the trial was in a United States court.

The station agent, who was white, testified that he did not know Jackson and had never seen him before the day of the theft.

Jackson's defense was ingenious. He did not deny that he got the money from the agent, but claimed that he won it.

The presiding judge seemed astounded at the defense, and asked: "Do you mean to tell me that you won this money from the agent shooting craps?"

"Yes, suh."

"Why, the agent doesn't know you never saw you before that day!"

"Deed, Judge, you don't have to be told for tuh shoot craps wit 'em!"

ODD BELIEFS ABOUT AMERICA

PROCURE BUTTER FROM FISH

Indians of British Columbia and Alaska Have a Never-Failing Supply of the Delicacy.

It is not generally known that the Indians of British Columbia and Alaska obtain their butter from a fish known to scientists as the oolichan. It is from six to eight inches long and very fat.

Every summer this fish comes from the ocean up the rivers to spawn, like salmon. Millions are taken in nets. First they are thrown into rough blins made of cedar logs, where they lie for a few days to soften in the sun.

Then they are placed in great cedar vats of boiling water, the latter being heated by hot stones which are dropped into them. This primitive method of heating has been found to produce better butter than when the fish are boiled in the more orthodox fashion.

As the oil rises to the top it is skimmed off. It hardens quickly and has the appearance of lard. Beautifully white, it is not easy to detect it from butter, there being not the slightest odor of fish about it. The Indians pack it in water-tight cedar boxes, making enough of this fish butter during the summer months to last them throughout the year.

Joke on Householder.

A prominent Clevelander, reports the Plain Dealer, of that city, was awakened in the night by mysterious noises from the lower floor and going down found a fellow filling his pockets with the silver on the sideboard.

The Cleveland man leaped on the burglar and speedily reduced him to the "got enough" stage. Then he let the man up and asked him what he meant by adopting such a disreputable profession. The fellow pleaded his youth and drink and bad company, and claimed it was his very first offense.

Whereupon, the householder, after exacting a promise from the prowler that he would give up his nefarious calling, opened the door and let him go.

"Perhaps that part of the adventure was all right," said the Cleveland man, "but, confound the fellow, I forgot all about making him take my silver out of his pockets."

And for years that story clung to him.

Hugging Bargains for Protection.

The other morning when a heavy shower came up there was rather an amazing sight downtown. About every other one was bearing a hat bag and she carried it in front of her across her bosom, in sort of chest protection.

All these various yarns fell in nicely with John Law's scheme, popularly known as "the Mississippi company." In the literature and maps boasting that enterprise Louisiana was represented as being embarrassingly crowded with rich mines.

Mountains of gold and cities of wonderland loveliness, pearls and precious stones—all these were ever just over the horizon. Not until after the French-Indian war did the people fully realize that their gold must be won from prairies and the forest, and their cities be built by their own hands.—Adventure Magazine.

"It's a millinery sale," replied a woman near him. "I mean, there is a big millinery sale downtown today, and about every other woman who came shopping bought a bargain hat. Now they are afraid they'll get their bargains wet, and holding them up to their chests like that is the only way they are sure of keeping them directly under their umbrellas."—Springfield Union.

Sounded Good.
Sir Walter de Freece is said to be one of the best raconteurs in English clubdom. One of his latest is of the man who accosted another in a West End saloon bar. "Pardon, but you are Dr. Smith, aren't you?" he inquired. The man addressed denied that that was his name. "But, surely," said the first speaker, "you attended my wife?" "I did not," was the answer, "nor am I a doctor." "Then you must have a double!" "Thank you!" said the man; "I will."—Argonaut.
