THIEVES LOOT POSTOFFICE

After Beating and Groggling Son of the Postmistress at Maple Park —Escape with $300.

Beating Walter O'Malley, son of the Postmistress of Maple Park, into unconsciousness, three masked cracksmen Friday night dynamited the safe of the Maple Park postoffice and escaped with more than $300. Bound and gagged and tied to the leg of a table, O'Malley was left helpless as the thieves made their escape. Consciousness returned to the plucky boy within a few minutes and he gamely strove to release himself. After a half hour of straining, he succeeded in gnawing one of the ropes in two. To raise himself to the table and with his free hand remove the gag and sever the ropes on his feet and wrists with an ink scratcher was but the work of a moment.

Due to a mistake in getting hold of the wrong can, Dr. J. W. Wiltshire, an auto enthusiast of Bloomington oiled his machine with maple molasses instead of the usual lubricant. After applying the syrup Dr. Wiltshire climbed into the auto and attempted to drive away but no effort of his could make it budge. Like a good autoist he got down under the horseless carriage and went through the usual maneuvers, petting and coddling and finally gave up in disgust. At a garage he was informed of his mistake.

Farmers in the Elgin district complain that clover fields are being overgrown with wild carrots and that they are a pest. One farmer cut his field and noticed several white blossoms scattered through the clover. Now the field has become nearly covered with a second growth of the blossoming weed which sprouted out in multiplied number from the stalk remaining.

Four giant bells, weighing 13,200 pounds, placed in the belfry of the forty-sixth floor of the Metropolitan Life building tower, rung for the first time, and thousands of persons in Madison Square heard the chimes, which are twice as high in the air as any other bells in the world. From now on they will strike the hour and every quarter hour for the great clock in the tower.

Dissatisfaction among the employees of the Elgin State Hospital that followed the removal of a man as supervisor three months ago and the installation of Miss Carrie Breckenridge in his place culminated in the resignation of twenty-two employees. More resignations are promised. Carl Lundgren, former Cub, has announced that at the end of the present season he will purchase half interest in the Elgin base-ball club. He probably will be chosen manager. Lundgren hopes to secure a franchise in the Chicago Baseball league.

Belvidere Republican: A telegram to The Republican received Wednesday afternoon stated that G. Maffioli & Son of Rockford were the lowest bidders on the new postoffice, their bid being $46,872, but that the question of award would not be settled for several days.

Extensive preparations are being made by the city officials of Elgin for entertaining mayors of Illinois cities at the annual convention in that city next month.

Information has been filed by the Illinois pure food commission with Assistant State's Attorney Roy R. Phillips, of Kane county, charging six different Elgin milk dealers with adulteration of their products.

James Blachford, a teamster employed by the city of Belvidere under Superintendent of Streets Cannon, drew a homestead in the Coeur d'Alene land drawing Thursday.

Frederick A. Schlick, of Rockford, has been appointed Supervisor of Census for this census district by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor and his commission has been signed by President Taft.

More Refutation

The following is taken from the Pecatonica News: Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Kepner, who expect to leave shortly for their new home at Genoa, Ill., were treated to a farewell surprise party at their home last Friday evening by a large company of their friends. The evening was spent at cards on the lawn, by the light of a large gasoline lamp, after which refreshments were served by the ladies from the well-filled baskets which they brought with them. The guests departed for their homes having had a most enjoyable time.

Eddington Burned Out

Three hours after William Eddington bought a restaurant at Logansport, Ind., it burned, including in the damage all of Eddington's personal property. When the new proprietor, for the first time, lit the gasoline stove there was an explosion. Eddington formerly owned the Little Gem restaurant here, selling to A. K. Merril.

FRANCHISE IS VOID

TRACTION CO. REJECTS ORDINANCE PASSED BY COUNCIL

GIVE FOUR REASONS WHY

Officials of Company and City Council will have Conference at a Special Meeting Tonight (Friday)

The ordinance recently passed by the city council of Genoa, granting a franchise to the Woodstock, Sycamore Traction Co., has been laid away, being now null and void, not only thru limitation but thru absolute rejection on the part of the company. At the regular meeting of the city council last Friday evening a communication from the company was read, rejecting the franchise. As stated in the Republican-Journal some time ago the company finds four objectionable sections in the ordinance. These pertain to the graving of the streets, giving a bond, painting the poles and stopping all cars at any crossing in the village limits. In all other respects the franchise was about right, to their notion. In fact the company wants just about what was asked for in the first place.

Will they get it? This question may be settled at a special meeting of the council this (Friday) evening when the officials of the company will be present and hold a conference with the city dads.

The bond business seems to be the greatest obstacle in the way of an agreement, the attorney for the road seeming to think that under the provisions of that section of the franchise the road would be a prey to persecution as well as honest prosecution. On the other hand the village council is thinking only of "Protection."

ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

Sycamore Man Grows Despondent and Tries to End Trouble

A marble cutter who has been employed in Sycamore the last three years shot himself with suicidal intent in the Kelley drug store on Wednesday morning of last week.

The trouble started when, after working as was his wont, with industry and great care for two weeks on a block of granite, he accidentally broke off a corner of the block—and the block and work were wasted. It seemed to him at the time the culmination of things gone wrong. Discouraged and sensitive about explaining to the proprietor, he quit work while the proprietor was out of town and gave himself up to despondency.

It is believed now, however, that the injured man has his grip again and sees the folly of this aberration. It is expected he will go to work shortly and all will be well.

MRS. HOOVER ENTERTAINS

In Honor of Miss Grace Colton, a Former Genoa Teacher

Mrs. T. J. Hoover entertained a number of ladies last Thursday afternoon in honor of Miss Grace Colton of Riley, a former teacher in the Genoa public schools. Miss Colton will soon become the bride of Mr. W. M. McCoy of Stoughton, Mo., also a former Genoa resident.

Miss Colton was presented with a set of solid silver tea spoons by the hostess and her guests. Light refreshments were served, the afternoon being greatly enjoyed by the ladies.

The following were present: Mesdames T. J. Hoover, Temperance Haines, C. A. Brown, G. C. Rowan, S. A. Wait, F. J. Drake, Frank Holroyd, W. E. Howlett, L. Robinson, F. W. Olmsted, L. M. Olmsted, C. D. Schoonmaker, Richard McCormick, Geo. Donohue, A. G. Stewart, A. Schneider; Misses Mary Donohue, Birdie Drake; Mrs. Talcott (nee Milner) of Crofton, Nebr.

ABANDONS FAMILY

Edward Bell of Kingston Arrested by Sheriff at Waukegan

Edward Bell of Kingston, charged with deserting his wife and two children at Kingston, was arrested at Waukegan Thursday by Sheriff Hohm and brought to Sycamore where he is detained in the county jail.

Bell's case on a similar charge was up in the circuit court about a year ago, when he was released on his promise to go back to his family and provide for it. Evidently he has not kept his promise, and the result is his arrest Thursday. His case will come up at the next term of court.

Charter Grove Church

A movement is on foot to discontinue services at the M. E. church at Charter Grove and take the members of that place into the Genoa church. The congregation at the Grove only averages ten or eleven people. It is thought advisable to consolidate and by so doing the expenses of the charge will be reduced considerably. The services of an assistant pastor could be dispensed with and the expense of keeping up the Charter Grove building eliminated. The question will be brought before the conference in Rockford next month.

The DeKalb county W. C. T. U. convention will be held in the M. E. church in Genoa September 16 and 17. Further announcements later.

LIFE AND PROPERTY

DESTROYED DURING TERRIFIC STORMS LAST WEEK

MANY BARN ARE BURNED

Little Girl Instantly Killed by Lightning at her Home South-east of Sycamore—Farm Losses

The most terrific electrical storms of recent years passed over this section of the country Thursday night, early Saturday morning and Saturday night, leaving in their path the ashes of many farm barns, live stock, grain and machinery. One life was also added to the toll demanded by the storm king a few miles from the county seat.

The first of the storms struck Genoa about seven o'clock Thursday night. There was a perfect deluge of rain accompanied by almost incessant lightning flashes. Shortly after the storm started the heavens were lighted in five different directions from the flames of burning barns within a radius of a few miles of Genoa. Not even the "oldest inhabitants" can recall any storm that caused more damage in so short a time and in so limited a section of country.

The unusual hot weather during the few weeks previous to the storm made the rain welcome, as the corn and late potatoes were in need of moisture. During the entire three or four days of storms however the intense heat did not let up in the least and by Sunday the oats in shocks and stack were beginning to grow, causing another source of worry for the farmer. On Sunday evening the wind changed and since that time there has been no danger of further rain. The weather still continues warm, but there is not the depressing humidity so noticeable the first of last week.

The fire nearest Genoa was on Geo. Eichler's farm, three miles north of town. On Thursday evening his large barn was struck by lightning and burned to the ground. It being early in the evening and the fire being discovered soon after the bolt struck, nearly everything movable was removed from the structure. About 40 tons of hay was consumed. Mr. Eichler carried $1,000 insurance on the barn.

The large barn on the Gilkerson farm, north-east of Genoa, was struck on the same evening, entailing a heavy loss for Mr. Gilkerson and the tenant, Otto Ottoson. The barn was insured for $1,000 and the contents were partly covered. Included in the loss were the barn, 40x80 feet, corn crib and chicken house, 49 tons of hay, nine calves, seven pieces of new machinery, practically all the harness on the farm and a lot of binder twine recently purchased by Mr. Ottoson.

Other losses on the same evening were large barns on the farms of Charles Meyers near Herbert, Frank Langlois near Maple Park and Frank King west of Kingston. Two barns were burned at the latter farm.

A barn on the George Doty farm near Pecatonica was burned, one on the Sands farm two miles north of Stillman Valley, one on the Sawyer farm near Belvidere, another on the Whitfield farm near Sandwich.

A heavy loss was caused on the Gleason farm near Kirkland on Friday night when the barn was struck and destroyed. Mr. Gleason had finished threshing and all his oats and barley were in the building and a large amount of hay. Every barn that was burned contained hay, in many cases all that the farmers had retained for their own use, making it necessary for them to buy hay for feed this winter.

On Thursday night Henry Holsker lost a steer, on Saturday morning a horse owned by Arthur Hill was killed and during the same storm a mare and colt were destroyed on the Ira Wilson farm between Kingston and Kirkland. There were many other losses of live stock thruout the country.

A mile south of Capron on the Vonga farm a barn was struck and burned together with all the hay and the season's crop of oats.

Probably the most severe loss inflicted in one place came when lightning struck the automobile barn on the Smith Younger farm a few miles south-east of Elgin. Two autos, the barn, office fixtures and scales were burned entailing a loss of $7,000.

Regarding the death of the little girl near Sycamore the True Republican says:

"Nora, the five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Roach, was instantly killed by lightning. The bolt struck the chimney of their modest little home about six miles southeast of Sycamore, just west of the county line road. Little Nora and her sister, Alice, were found lying beside each other unconscious. The younger child had been instantly killed, and Alice, only a few years older, was badly burned. She was revived and will recover. The other members of the family escaped without serious injury. The parents are in poor circumstances. They are almost prostrated by their grief."

Congressman Fuller's house at Belvidere was struck by lightning on Saturday night, but no damage was done other than scattering shingles over the neighborhood. The steeple of the Baptist church at Cherry Valley was split and plaster knocked from the ceiling by a bolt on the same evening.

Saturday night at 11 o'clock the big house on the farm of Morwood Veale, located five miles southwest of Malta in Milan, was struck by lightning and burned to the ground. Mr. and Mrs. Vern Veale, who are running the farm, were in Malta at the time and the only one in the house was the hired man. He barely escaped with his life. Before help could be summoned the house and contents were a mass of ruins.

During the thunder storm which swept over this section Thursday Miss Jennie Jelinek of Algonquin was killed by lightning. Her death was witnessed by a number of friends and relatives.

A. H. Beck, a traveling cigar-maker, whose home probably was in Cincinnati, was found about eight o'clock Friday morning lying dead on a pile of lumber in the yards of the North Side Lumber company at Sycamore. One theory is that Beck became so frightened by the violence of the storm that heart failure ensued.

Chas. Carlson, who lives not far east from Herbert, had a horse killed by lightning during the storm Saturday night.

The roof on a barn on the Stephen Blachford farm in the town of Spring was blown off in the storm Saturday morning. The tenants on the farm are George Atkins and John Conger.

From all accounts that can be gathered by the Republican-Journal Genoa was about the center of the three storms and DeKalb county suffered more than any other in the state. Some corn was flattened in this vicinity but not enough to cause any great loss.

It is a noticeable fact that not one of the barns burned was protected with lightning rods, as far as can be ascertained at this time. It looks to us as tho a good lightning rod is as important as insurance. There are a few, however, who can not see the necessity of either until too late.

WHITE WASH BRUSH

HANDLED NICELY BY GENOA BASE BALL TEAM

DEKALB TEAM GETS A COAT

Good Crowd Sees the Genoa Boys Put One Over on the Barb City Lads —Four Double Plays

Genoa again wielded the brush Sunday, over the DeKalb East Ends, this time the score being 5 to 0. Earlier in the season DeKalb came very near putting it over Genoa, they having at the end of the 4th inning, 4 runs and Genoa having none when rain stopped the game. They, judging by this game, were very confident they would have a walk-away, but Senska was right and the team behind him playing an errorless game never gave the visitors a chance to score. Genoa's first run came in the first inning when Patterson singled and went from 1st to 3rd on Olmsted's sacrifice, scoring on a wild throw by F. Weinlund to catch Olmsted at 1st. McKee hit to shortstop, reaching 1st on the play to the plate catching Olmsted, scoring on Leitzow's hit. In the 3rd inning two more runs came in as the result of hits by McKee, Leitzow and B. Senska. The last run came in the 6th when Browne getting a hit, was brought in by Patterson's single. DeKalb was easily put down. In the 3rd inning, Esterbrook, the first man up, made a hit, but later was put out on a double play pulled off by McKee to B. Senska to Olmsted when Holderness hit to McKee. In the 6th Holderness rapped the ball safely but he too ran into a double play when Weinlund hit to McKee, being made by the same players. In the 7th things looked somewhat favorable for DeKalb, as the first two men up gained first on hits but the chances were spoiled when Vickell, trying to bunt, popped out to B. Senska, who threw to 1st, completing the 3rd double play. In the 9th Nelson hit and was advanced by F. Weinlund's sacrifice. Vickell, the next man up, hit the ball hard and it looked like a run for DeKalb but McKee made a fine catch and threw to B. Senska on 2nd making the 4th double play in the game and retiring the side. DeKalb made eight scattering hits. Leitzow and Patterson carried off the batting honors of the day, each getting three nits.

Genoa has a good fielding team, having played the last two games without an error. The team will have a hard proposition next Sunday when they play the Elgin Athletics, the fastest amateur team in that city.

A large crowd attended the game last Sunday despite the hot weather, a fact encouraging to the boys.

The case of J. C. Walton, charged with the murder of W. T. Flynn, went to the jury at Meridian, Miss., after 13 days' hearing. The defendant introduced a plea of insanity and presented 101 witnesses to sustain the plea, while the state introduced 88 to refute it.

Charles D. Norton, assistant secretary of the treasury, has distributed cards to employes of the department with instructions "to state briefly any facts regarding your efficiency and the conditions of your work which it is desired to bring to the notice of the department."

Secretary Nagel of the department of commerce and labor has returned to Washington to prepare for the next census so he can return to his summer home in Massachusetts next week. A considerable saving will be made, he has found, in the cost of taking the next census.

JILTED YOUTH SHOOTS GIRL Demands Return of His Ring, Is Refused—Crowd Witnesses His Attempt at Murder.

Portsmouth, O., Aug. 17.—Enraged because he had been jilted, Harry Bliss, 18 years old, shot and fatally wounded Miss Minnie Clarke, aged 17 years. The shooting took place at one of the most prominent corners in the city, and was witnessed by many persons.

Miss Clarke was employed in a shoe factory, and shortly after the whistle blew Bliss stepped up to her and demanded his ring back. When Miss Clarke refused, Bliss pulled a revolver and shot her through the back, the right lung being penetrated. Bliss was arrested.

Osteopaths at Minneapolis. Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 17.—The American Osteopathic association began a four days' convention here today in the city hall. The members were welcomed by Dr. E. C. LIKE INDIANA'S PLAN

HOOSIER METHOD OF TREATING CRIMINALS FAVORED BY PRISON CONGRESS.

CAUSES SPIRITED DEBATE

Motion to Suppress Paper by Dr. Sharp Talked Down—Women Take Part in Argument—American Jails Are Condemned.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 17.—Delegates to the convention of the American Prison association only laughed to-day when Mrs. L. R. Eastwood of South Dakota advocated chloroforming idiots.

A paper by Dr. Sharp of Indiana was read by Amos W. Butler of Indianapolis, and was listened to in silence. After a discussion of the outdoor plan of treating convicts, in which every speaker told of the good results of banishing armed guards and putting the prisoners on honor, the debate on the Indiana plan was begun by a delegate moving that Dr. Sharp's paper be suppressed on the ground that the Indiana plan was contrary to the Bible.

The debate on the "Indiana plan," which prevents the propagation of criminals and idiots, developed almost unanimous sentiment for it. The discussion, according to President Gilmore of Toronto, Can., was the most profitable the association has held in years.

Would Bar the Women. One delegate objected to the debating being continued before women, who composed at least one-third of the audience. Thereupon the women delegates at once took the lead in the controversy, led by Mrs. Deborah C. Weeks, president of the Philadelphia Social Purity league.

During the debate it was announced that Connecticut and California had followed Indiana. The motion to suppress was not put to a vote. President Gilmore said it would not have received three votes.

County Jail Is Rapped. Declaring that modern jails, especially the county jail, are deficient, W. A. Gates of San Francisco created a stir.

He told the necessities of the battle of to-day and pointed out the ways by which the proper conveniences might be attained. The session was an interesting one and Mr. Gates' points were well taken.

"The county jail has been charged, indicted, tried and convicted time and time again for ruining the bodies and souls of its victims, but each time the execution has been stayed and it is still unwhipped of justice," said W. A. Gates, secretary of the California board of charities, in an address at the convention of the American Prison association.

"To reform the county jail and make it an instrument of good instead of evil the following steps are necessary: "District workhouses for all prisoners sentenced to terms in jail, and a proper labor system installed therein.

"A separate cell for each prisoner, well lighted and ventilated, and supplied with sanitary plumbing. "Sufficient rooms or departments so that prisoners may be classified according to sex, age and apparent criminality, and each class be completely separated from the other.

Improve Social Order. "Trained jailers with humane instincts and high character, who appreciate the opportunity of making better the persons placed in their charge.

"The improvement of our county jail system, however, depends upon a general improvement of social order. No material advance will be made until man puts a higher value upon his fellow man. Society must feel that men are worth saving before it will throw out the life line. This will not come until we forsake the worship of the 'golden calf' and give obedience to the golden rule."

Mr. Gates criticized the handling and treatment of female prisoners in several counties of California and recommended the enactment of a law compelling the appointment of a matron in every county jail.

YOAKUM TALKS TO FARMERS Considers Grain and Cotton Fields Stronger Military Defenses Than Warships, He Says.

Shawnee, Okla., Aug. 18.—Deprecating the growing expenditures which the United States is incurring in connection with the maintenance of the army and the navy, and declaring that the grain and cotton fields of the Mississippi valley and the west are stronger military defenses than warships, B. J. Yoakum, chairman of the executive committee of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Company, delivered an address here before the Farmers' union of Oklahoma.

Mr. Yoakum's subject was "The Farmer and the Railroad." He strongly advocated good roads as a means of bringing the carrier and the producer closer together.

Attorney Simpson's Body Found. Park Falls, Wis., Aug. 18.—The body of Attorney James H. Simpson, who has been missing since August 11, was discovered tangled in a mass of driftwood in the Flambeau river, a short distance south of here. He is supposed to have walked into the river while temporarily insane and drowned.

THE CHORUS: "HELP! HELP! HELP!"

NOT POLITICAL JOB

TAFT SAYS CENSUS TAKERS MUST NOT DO ANY ELECTORNEERING.

WILL LOSE JOBS IF THEY DO

President in Letter to Secretary Nagel Declares Workers Must Not Engage in Politics—Names 184 of the Supervisors.

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 16.—In a letter addressed to Secretary Nagel of the department of commerce and labor, President Taft served notice that any man engaged in the taking of the thirteenth census of the United States who engages in politics in any way will immediately be dismissed from the service.

Outside of casting their votes the president believes that census supervisors and enumerators should keep clear of anything that savors of politics, national, state or local.

"The president orders that the secretary of commerce and labor and the director of the census embody in the regulations governing the taking of the census the rule so forcibly laid down in his letter.

Has Appointed 184. One hundred and thirty-four additional supervisors of the census were appointed yesterday. Altogether 184 of the 330 supervisors now have been commissioned and Mr. Taft's task is a little more than half completed.

Among those appointed are: Illinois, Third district, Frederick A. Schlick; Fourth district, Donald A. Callahan; Sixth district, Frank W. Latimer; Seventh district, Charles Sykes Burdick; Ninth district, George W. Royster; Twelfth district, William J. Butter; Fifteenth district, S. Bartlett Kerr; Sixteenth district, John T. Galbraith.

Indiana, First district, William D. Crow; Second district, James A. Searing; Third district, William W. Lingle; Fourth district, William O. Prezman; Fifth district, Samuel J. Wilton; Sixth district, William Henry Cleman; Seventh district, William Low Rice; Eighth district, Joseph Riley Broyles; Ninth district, Abel Telemachus Claypool; Tenth district, Francis H. Doran; Eleventh district, Henry Louis Bendel; Twelfth district, John Wood; Thirteenth district, Samuel R. Thomas.

Iowa, First district, John W. Rowley; Second district, Asa A. Hall; Seventh district, Cambridge Culbertson.

Kansas, First district, Reese Van Sant; Second district, William H. Smith; Third district, Charles Yoe.

Minnesota, First district, Frank E. Gartside; Second district, Clark W. Gilmore; Third district, Avis B. Kelly; Fourth district, William Byron Webster; Fifth district, Charles H. Cairns; Sixth district, Ezra Edward McCrea; Seventh district, Charles W. Odell; Eighth district, Byron Lincoln Hollister; Ninth district, Daniel Willard Meeker.

Nebraska, First district, Frank E. Helvy; Second district, Charles L. Saunders; Third district, Joseph Albert Hays; Fourth district, Philip F. Bross.

North Dakota, First district, Carl N. Frich.

Denies Meeting of Governors. Potosky, Mich., Aug. 18.—Regarding a report that he was to meet Govs. Johnson of Minnesota and Harmon of Ohio here to talk over national politics, Gov. Marshall of Indiana said there was no foundation for the statement.

Men Lost on Mountain. Tacoma, Wash., Aug. 18.—The offer of a reward by the family of Joseph W. Stevens of Trenton, N.J., who with T. V. Callaghan is lost on Mount Tacoma, has spurred expert mountain climbers to renew efforts to find the men dead or alive.

No Cigarettes for "Cops." Wilkesbarre, Pa., Aug. 18.—Mayor Lewis P. Kniffen of this city declares he will not permit any officer of the Wilkesbarre police force to smoke cigarettes. He does not like them and ordered a policeman smelling of cigarette smoke out of the city hall.

Committed Burglaries with Aid of a Negro Crook and Lived Jekyll-Hyde Life in Chicago—Had Starting Career in Crime.

Chicago, Aug. 18.—Mrs. Evelyn C. Romadka, divorced wife of the multimillionaire Milwaukee trunk manufacturer, Charles L. Romadka, who two years ago confessed she had been leading a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde existence, participating in a score of sensational burglaries with the assistance of a negro thief while living a life of luxury and ease in a fashionable hotel, will in all probability be released from the penitentiary at Joliet next month.

Another chapter was added to the story of the weird life of Mrs. Romadka, which is even more fantastic than that of Hornung's fiction character "Raffles," when it became known that friends of her girlhood days, of Fond du Lac and Oshkosh, Wis., had petitioned Gov. Deneen and the Illinois board of pardons asking for the liberation of the former school teacher and millionaire's wife.

Father Will Spend Fortune. Undaunted by the wealthy Romadka family's refusal to assist in gaining her health, her aged father, P. J. Caine, who owns a large rubber plantation in Mexico, has declared he will spend his entire fortune in his daughter's behalf.

Maurice McKenna of Fond du Lac, a well-known Wisconsin lawyer, has been retained in the case and has been granted an opportunity to make a plea for Mrs. Romadka before the board of pardons at the session in September.

Besides the Wisconsin petition a letter from the state's attorney's office has been forwarded to Gov. Deneen and the board declaring no objection will be made to the release of the society woman burglar.

Assistant State's Attorney Clifford G. Roe, who prosecuted Mrs. Romadka, sent a letter to the board of pardons at the request of Attorney McKenna, urging a parole for the prisoner.

Punishment Is Sufficient. "I believe Mrs. Romadka has been punished sufficiently by her confinement in the penitentiary during the last two years," said Attorney Roe. "She is a young and delicate woman and longer confinement might prove fatal. While I know she is guilty of all the charges brought against her, I think, as I said in my letter, she was led astray by romantic delusions."

Mrs. Romadka's arrest and conviction was one of the sensations of Chicago and Milwaukee business and society circles and cleared away the mystery surrounding the burglary of a score of wealthy homes.

Mrs. Romadka had been living in an apartment at the Victoria hotel and was receiving a large allowance from her husband. While at dinner with a prominent board of trade man a diamond bracelet which she was wearing was identified as one stolen from Mrs. C. E. Beck, 5560 South Park avenue. Mrs. Romadka was arrested. When taken to the detective bureau she asserted the jewelry had been given her by a "Ralph Smith."

On learning of the wealth of her husband she was released and the police started a search for the mysterious man.

When several other thefts were traced to her Mrs. Romadka said her first offense occurred at a ball in Milwaukee tendered Prince Henry of Prussia, at which the nobleman declared Miss Gene Dolan, Mrs. Romadka's future sister-in-law, was the most beautiful woman he had ever seen.

BOY ARRESTED AS "WRECKER" Chicago Man's Son Is Charged with Railroad Vandalism at Covert, Mich.

South Haven, Mich., Aug. 17.—Richard Phelps, aged 13 years, son of a Chicago railroad man, was arrested at Covert, charged with four attempts to wreck trains on the Fruit Belt railway.

It is said the boy, who was lodged in jail, has confessed. Phelps' father has a summer home at Covert where the lad has been spending the summer vacation.

Men Lost on Mountain. Tacoma, Wash., Aug. 18.—The offer of a reward by the family of Joseph W. Stevens of Trenton, N.J., who with T. V. Callaghan is lost on Mount Tacoma, has spurred expert mountain climbers to renew efforts to find the men dead or alive.

$2,500 Reward for Murderer. Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 18.—The reward for the apprehension of the murderer of Miss Anna Schumacher, the 17-year-old girl who met her death at Holy Sepulcher cemetery ten days ago, was increased from $500 to $2,500.

Barcelona Siege Is Raised. Barcelona, Aug. 18.—The state of siege declared during the revolt has been raised.

Severe. Samuel Gompers was talking in the smokeroom of the Baltic about a recent newspaper attack on a rich corporation.

"It was a cruel attack," Mr. Gompers chuckled. "It was as cruel as the Jonesville Clarion's paragraph about old Deacon Hiram Ludlow.

"This paragraph headed the Clarion's obituary column. It said: "Deacon Hiram Ludlow of Frisble township, aged 82, passed peacefully away on Thursday last from single blessedness to matrimonial bliss after a short but severe attack by Maria Higgins, a blooming widow of 37 summers."—Detroit Journal.

The Newer Way. Many ideas in regard to women have entirely changed, and among the better and wiser changes is that old thought that the women who were given to good works must needs be dowdy. It is undeniable that "good" women used to wear dowdiness as a sort of hall mark of virtue. As a matter of fact, dowdiness is merely a mark of bad taste and a sign of some lack in the mind. Women are no longer lacking in the wisdom that chooses pretty rather than ugly clothing, and those who do not make the best of their appearance are losing a golden opportunity of giving pleasure.

A Realist. "I am a great believer in realism," remarked the poet. "Yes?" we queried with a rising inflection, thereby giving him the desired opening.

"I sometimes carry my ideas of realism to a ridiculous extreme," continued the poet. "Indeed!" we exclaimed inanely, somewhat impatient to reach the point of his witticism.

"Yes," continued the poet, "the other day I wrote a sonnet to the gas company and purposely made the meter defective."

Look at the Names. In 4 A. D. Fearaidhach-Fionafshna was an Irish king, a "most just and good prince," who was slain by his successor, Fiachadh-Fion, who was followed to a similar fate by Fionadh-Fionhuhd, "the prince with the white cows," who died at the hands of the Irish plebeians of Connaught. Eochairh-Moldmeadhain was one of the half dozen who died of natural causes, and Flathheartagh was one of the two to resign the monarch's scepter for the monk's cowl.—New York Press.

BAD DREAMS Caused by Coffee. "I have been a coffee drinker, more or less, ever since I can remember, until a few months ago I became more and more nervous and irritable, and finally I could not sleep at night for I was horribly disturbed by dreams of all sorts and a species of distressing nightmare.

"Finally, after hearing the experience of numbers of friends who had quit coffee and were drinking Postum, and learning of the great benefits they had derived, I concluded coffee must be the cause of my trouble, so I got some Postum and had it made strictly according to directions.

"I was astonished at the favour and taste. It entirely took the place of coffee, and to my very great satisfaction, I began to sleep peacefully and sweetly. My nerves improved, and I wish I could wear every man, woman and child from the unwholesome drug—ordinary coffee.

"People really do not appreciate or realize what a powerful drug it is and what terrible effect it has on the human system. If they did, hardly a pound of it would be sold. I would never think of going back to coffee again. I would almost as soon think of putting my hand in a fire after I had once been burned.

"A young lady friend of ours had stomach trouble for a long time, and could not get well as long as she used coffee. She finally quit coffee and began the use of Postum and is now perfectly well. Yours for health."

FROM SAVAGERY to MINIONS of the LAW

By WILL P. SHAFTER

THE mutiny of 30 members of the Philippine constabulary at Davao has brought to notice that splendid organization, founded on the remnants of Aguinaldo's insurrectionary army in the early days of the American occupation. For the last eight years they have given to the islands a season of law and order and to various tribes of our newer domain a respect for the majesty of the great nation of whose army they form, though indirectly, an important part.

The mutiny, in itself, amounted to little. One American planter was killed by the bullets of the mutineers and there were two or three men wounded. Then the loyal members of the constabulary, with the backing of small detachments of the Twenty-third and Twenty-fifth United States infantry, chased the would-be revolutionaries back into the fastnesses of the Davao hills and, within 48 hours of the first notice of the difficulty reaching headquarters the first internal serious trouble since the organization of the corps was at an end.

The Philippine constabulary was organized just nine years ago. At the conclusion of the insurrection of 1899-1900 the military governor of the Philippines, Gen. Arthur MacArthur, issued the following order: "In order to encourage among the people the idea of self-protection against robbers and roving bands of criminals, with which the country abounds, department commanders are authorized to arm the local police in towns where such action, in their judgment, would be prudent and expedient. For this purpose requisitions may be submitted to the division headquarters for caliber .45 Colt's revolvers and an adequate supply of ammunition. This arm will be replaced at an early date by a more suitable weapon.

"For the better performance of the duties contemplated it is desired that the organization of police be systematized and, if possible, the scope of action extended so as to make these constabulary bodies, by means of mounted detachments, conservators of the peace and safety of districts, instead of confining their operations to areas limited by the boundaries of towns and barracks.

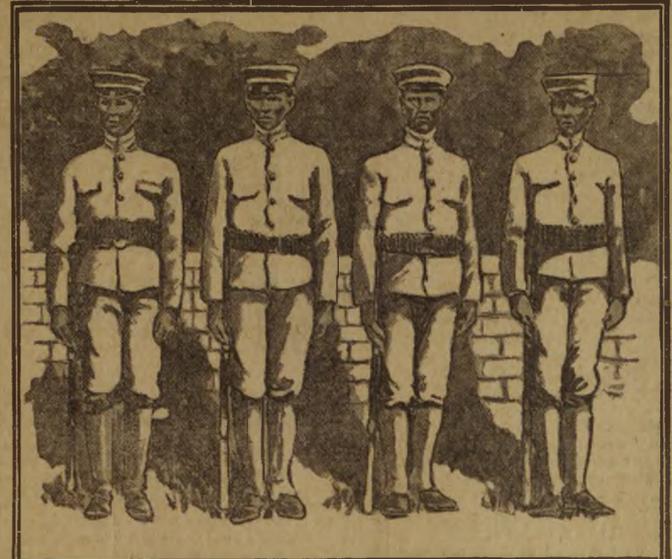

"Department commanders are empowered to enforce the provisions of this order by appropriate instructions."

By the autumn of 1900 some organization of the constabulary had been effected and in February, 1901, the Philippine government had, in addition to the army and the native scouts then on duty, an embryo of the present efficient constabulary force numbering 2,571 men.

The newly organized body had an amusing complexity of personnel and diversity of armament. It included every race and every color, every language and every degree of civilization, from cultured Castilians of the Maleson drive to the dusky savage of Mindanao and Negros. The catalogue of their weapons was fully as mixed as their racial affiliations.

The organization grew in numbers and in popularity. At first the ill-disposed were prone to take chances with the little "coppers." They had seen them as soldiers of the army of Aguinaldo driven from point to point by the husky soldiers of the United States until they had become imbued with the idea that running was their chief and only accomplishment. It took but a few brushes with them to show that they had gained something of Uncle Sam's determination to do things in his own way and when the way of the preserver of order and the native disorganizer ran counter something had to drop, and drop hard. Gradually the good work of the constabulary became understood and with the spread of their reputation for keeping things straight the minor disorders of the urban and agricultural communities became fewer and fewer.

When at the last pacification of the civilized and semi-civilized portions of the islands became an established fact the constabulary took up the work of teaching the hill tribes, the head hunters and professional lardons that the plying of their various forms of nefarious business or pleasure anywhere near a constabulary post was a highly unwholesome pastime. When the hillmen and others got enough of going out on trouble hunts the constabulary organized little trips on their own account and went back into the woods to drag out the real bad men and teach them the art of behaving themselves even under their own vines and banana trees.

PART OF COMPANY A, 2ND DIST—ONE YEAR IN SERVICE

SAME RECRUITS ON DAY OF ENLISTMENT

as the veriest of rookies. In the second picture, straight, trim, clean, well-drilled and set up fit to make even a regular look to his laurels, they are presented again. In a third of a year they have been converted from semi-savagery and are representative members of one of the best disciplined bodies of troops in the world.

The Philippines have been divided into districts by the constabulary and each of these districts—there are five in all—contains about a thousand of these soldier policemen. The force numbers, in addition to the sub-district of Palawan and the Constabulary school at Intramuros, Manila, something over 5,000. They are under the command of Brig-Gen. Henry H. Bandholtz, who holds the title of director. There is an assistant director, two inspectors and a staff of about a dozen officers attached to the headquarters at Manila. There is a director for each of the general districts of the archipelago and these districts in turn are divided into subdistricts and minor stations, some of the smaller stations having only half a dozen policemen in charge.

In the early days of the force the officers of commissioned rank were all Americans. A large percentage, a majority, in fact, are still natives of the States, but there is always opportunity for the ambitious and educated Filipino to reach a promotion if by diligence, fidelity and good hard work he desires to accomplish it.

The force at first appeared in a great variety of uniforms, everything from the cast-off blue and white drill of their former conquerors, the Spaniards, to the rusty blue flannel shirts and khaki breeches of the American volunteers, who put Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo out of business. To-day they are all uniformed alike and their appearance is distinctly natty. Khaki for service and general wear, with shoulder cords and facings of artillery red, caps or campaign hats, in accordance with the season, wool puttees and comfortable canvas shoes complete the rig.

For dress occasions the officers wear snowy duck and the enlisted men are privileged to provide themselves with a similar costume for fiesta days and Sundays if they so desire. The Mahometan members of the organization wear the tarboosh or fez instead of the cap, as may be seen in the picture of the Moro detachment, which is known officially as Company A, Fifth district constabulary. The fez is of crimson felt and the tassel which hangs to the eyebrows is of yellow silk.

A portion of the force is mounted. It is the hope of the Philippine government that, as the islands become more and more orderly and the necessity for the retention of regular cavalry has passed, they will be able to make nearly the whole constabulary a mounted organization. Horses or the little Philippine ponies have been used most of the time, one of the pictures shows what the men have been put to at times of flood, the carabo, the unique Philippine beast of burden, having been used as a cavalry horse on more than one occasion. When on land his progress is perhaps a trifle slow, but he is a mud horse of high degree, a splendid wader and an even better swimmer. Some of the Americans who have had occasion to use the carabo as a means of locomotion say that they would be almost willing to attempt the crossing of the Pacific astride his bony shoulders.

CURIOSITIES OF BIRD-NESTING

An authority says: "It is not at all an uncommon thing to find the first and sometimes second egg of a young bird abnormally small, but I came across a case some few years ago which was quite unique. In April, 1901, I was hunting for a few clutches of the carrion crow in some small woods, which were their favorite nesting places in that district. I walked right through the first wood without success, but on leaving it I saw, perched on a tree some distance away, two crows. Guessing that I had disturbed them and that they were watching me, I walked on for some distance, still keeping my eye on them. Sure enough, as soon as they were satisfied that I was leaving, one of them made off straight for a large oak tree at the extreme end of the wood I had just left. On returning I discovered the nest and the reason I had missed it. It was built out on the extreme end of the lowest limb of the tree, within 10 feet of the ground, and hidden by the undergrowth below—a most unusual position. I climbed to the nest and was much astonished at the contents. In it were four miniature crow's eggs, very little larger than blackbird's eggs, and in shape almost round. On blowing them I found the shells were abnormally thick and tough for the size of the eggs and they contained no yolk. Knowing that the crows invariably remain in the same locality year after year the following season I went to look for my friends again and to my great delight found the nest in a very similar position in another oak tree within 30 yards of the first nest. It contained five eggs, four exact counterparts of the first clutch and one of normal size, the only one to contain any yolk. The following season I found them for the third time again quite close to the previous nests; this time there were four eggs, only one small one and three full size."

BEFORE A BONTOC IGORROTE AND AFTER

insular government can use as it will and when or wherever it is needed the Philippine constabulary stand comparable to any irregular force in the world. They have much in common with the Indian police maintained for much similar purposes by the viceregal government of British India, but they are more the soldier than even that famous body of conservers of the law. Their discipline has improved with rapid strides and has kept pace with their efficiency and usefulness.

The constabulary maintains the finest military band in the islands. It was their band which participated in the inauguration of President Taft and which later toured the United States, giving concerts.

ILLINOIS BREVITIES

Peoria.—Capt. J. T. Siler, assistant surgeon in the United States army, and Dr. Lavinder, assistant surgeon in the United States public health and marine hospital service, are at the Illinois General Insane Asylum at South Bartonville and will remain indefinitely, being detailed from Washington to make an exhaustive study and report on pellagra, otherwise known as Alpine scurvy or Italian leprosy, with which 50 of the 2,000 insane patients are found to be afflicted.

Joliet.—Due only to the fact that he had become hungry and had left the chair car in which he was riding and gone to the dining car, does Rev. Charles M. Brown of this city owe his life, as well as those of the members of his family. The train on which they were riding was thrown down an embankment, and the people who were sitting immediately in front and behind the seats previously occupied by Dr. Brown and his family were killed.

Elgin.—From all indications the trouble at the Elgin State hospital is to be more far reaching than was first anticipated. The resigned employees say they are going to place their side of the case before the civil service board. The employees say partially is not only shown by Miss Curry Breckenridge but by others higher in authority. They claim the superintendent is absent from the hospital on the average of ten days each month.

Charleston.—The dream of William Hugh Mason, pianist with Slaton's Jubilee Singers, Chicago organization, which appeared at the chautauqua, came true. Mason told another member of his company a few days ago that he felt as if his death was but a matter of a few days and that he would die suddenly. Mason died only a few hours after he had taken his part on the program at the chautauqua.

Chicago.—Driven desperate by unrequited love, Thomas K. Katsnes, a former West side restaurant keeper, shot and instantly killed Miss Victoria Kalawez, 113 Augusta street, in a crowded street car at Milwaukee and North Ashland avenues. Katsnes then tried to end his own life and discharged the revolver with which he had slain the girl at his head. He fell to the floor of the car unconscious.

Decatur.—Charles Van Studdiford, husband of Grace Van Studdiford, a widely-known light opera singer, was seriously injured. He was overcome by the heat and fell from a tallyho coach, striking on his head and suffering a possible fracture of the skull.

Bloomington.—Delegates to the annual convention of the Wood River Baptist association, colored, which opened here, were incensed over the refusal of restaurant keepers to allow a company of women delegates from Chicago to be served in their places, because of their color.

Cairo.—Henry Salzman, a photographer, is in jail here, charged with attempting to murder his wife with an ax. The woman was found in a mutilated condition and regained consciousness only long enough to accuse her husband of the crime.

Odin.—A search has been inaugurated for William A. Myers, a pioneer oil well digger, who disappeared from home several days ago, saying he was going to St. Louis to close a deal, but was not heard from again.

Alton.—Given hearings on the charge of killing Steve Dimeda at Wood River, J. T. Ashlock and William Varney were each held on bond of $5,000 to await the action of the grand jury on the charge.

Centralia.—The police of this city and those of southern Illinois were asked to locate Paul, the nine-year-old son of Mrs. Dave Fitzgerald, who was taken Saturday from the street, where he was playing.

Aurora.—Driving into a ditch and risking serious injury, Norton H. Van Sicken, a racing motorist, saved the life of an infant who lay in the road directly in his path. The machine was going at 80 miles an hour at the time.

Paxton.—James Huston, aged, 90 years, died at his home in Monmouth, where funeral services were held by his pastor, Dr. John A. Burnett of the First United Presbyterian church.

Springfield.—The National Sheriff's association at Seattle decided to hold the next convention in Springfield. Charles W. Peters of Chicago was elected president.

Petersburg.—With an increase of 30 in the number of tents on the grounds and with the cottages all occupied and new ones added, the Old Salem chautauqua opened its twelfth assembly.

Palmyra.—It is quite probable that before many months Palmyra will have a new Methodist church costing, complete with furnishings, about $15,000.

Moline.—Descending an old abandoned shaft out of curiosity, Walter Cole and Arthur Harrington were overcome by gas and lost their lives.

Austin.—Rev. Judson B. Thomas has been named as pastor of the First Baptist church, coming from the Secretaryship of the Baptist Home Missionary society, which position he has filled for 14 years.

DISCOURAGED WOMEN.

A Word of Hope for Despairing ones.

Kidney trouble makes weak, weary, worn women. Backache, hip pains, dizziness, headaches, nervousness, languor, urinary troubles make women suffer untold misery. Ailing kidneys are the cause. Cure them. Mrs. S. D. Ellison, N. Broadway, Lamar, Mo., says: "Kidney trouble wore me down till I had to take to bed. I had terrible pains in my body and limbs and the urine was annoying and full of sediment. I got worse and doctors failed to help. I was discouraged. Doan's Kidney Pills brought quick relief and a final cure and now I am in the best of health."

A PROPOSAL.

Mr. Hardup—Good morning, Miss Aughtum—ahem! There is something I have been wishing to ask you for some time, but—er—the fact is, I haven't been able to screw up enough courage to—er—come to the point.

Miss Aughtum—A proposal at last! Mr. Hardup—Could you, my dear Miss Aughtum—could you lend me five dollars?

IN AGONY WITH ECZEMA.

Whole Body a Mass of Raw, Bleeding, Torturing Humor—Hoped Death Would End Fearful Suffering.

In Despair; Cured by Cuticura.

"Words cannot describe the terrible eczema I suffered with. It broke out on my head and kept spreading until it covered my whole body. I was almost a solid mass of sores from head to foot. I looked more like a piece of raw beef than a human being. The pain and agony endured seemed more than I could bear. Blood and pus oozed from the great sore on my scalp, from under my finger nails, and nearly all over my body. My ears were so crusted and swollen I was afraid they would break off. Every hair in my head fell out. I could not sit down, for my clothes would stick to the raw and bleeding flesh, making me cry out from the pain. My family doctor did all he could, but I got worse and worse. My condition was awful. I did not think I could live, and wanted death to come and end my frightful sufferings. "In this condition my mother-in-law begged me to try the Cuticura Remedies. I said I would, but had no hope of recovery. But oh, what blessed relief I experienced after applying Cuticura Ointment. It cooled the bleeding and itching flesh and brought me the first real sleep I had had in weeks. It was as grateful as ice to a burning tongue. I would bathe with warm water and Cuticura Soap, then apply the Ointment freely. I also took Cuticura Resolvent for the blood. In a short time the sores stopped running, the flesh began to heal, and I knew I was to get well again. Then the hair on my head began to grow, and in a short time I was completely cured. I wish I could tell everybody who has eczema to use Cuticura. Mrs. Wm. Hunt, 135 Thomas St., Newark, N. J., Sept. 28, 1908."

The Artless Boy.

The boy bowed politely to the grocer. "I understand," he said, "that you want a boy, sir. Will you kindly look me over." "I only pay $3," said the grocer, abruptly. "I understand," said the boy, "that you paid four." The grocer nodded. "I did pay four," he said, "until I saw in the paper the other day that Millionaire Rogers began his business career on $3 a week." The boy smiled. "But I don't expect to be a millionaire," he said. "I don't care to be rich—I'd much rather be good." The grocer was so much pleased with this artless reply that he compromised with the boy for three and a half.

And Ma Fainted.

"Why did she refuse you?" she asked her son, with fine scorn. "Well," the boy replied between his sobs, "she objects to our family. She says pa's a loafer, that you're too fat and that everybody laughs at Dayse Mayne because she's a fool and talks about nothing but the greatness of her family." (Chauncey threw water in his mother's face, but at three o'clock this afternoon she was still in a swoon, with four doctors working on her.)—Atchison (Kan.) Globe.

His Colors.

"What are your son's college colors?" "Well," answered Farmer Cortosel, "Josh has figured so strong in hazing and football, I should say they must be black and blue."

Heart Strength

Heart strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve Strength, or Nerve Weakness—nothing more. Positively, not one weak heart in a hundred is, in itself, actually diseased. It is almost always a hidden tiny little nerve that really is all at fault. This obscure nerve—the Cardiac, or Heart Nerve—simply needs, and must have, more power, more stability, more controlling, more governing strength. Without that the heart must continue to fail, and the stomach and kidneys also have these same controlling nerves.

This clearly explains why, as a medicine, Dr. Shoop's Restorative has in the past done so much for weak and ailing hearts. Dr. Shoop first sought the cause of all this painful, palpitating, suffocating heart distress. Dr. Shoop's Restorative—this popular prescription—is alone directed to these weak and wasting nerve centers. It builds it; strengthens; it offers real, genuine heart help.

If you would have strong hearts, strong digestion, strengthen these nerves—re-establish them as needed, with

THAT police magistrate in New York City who advocates the whipping post for wife beaters is a man after our own heart. 'Twas a sorry day when the pillory and whipping post went out of style. A small fine has no terrors for the brute who will beat his wife. If he were whipped in public or exhibited in a pillory for a few hours he would think twice before striking the woman he has promised to protect.

At some time in the future you may have the pleasure of hearing Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin in one of his famous chautauqua lectures. Senator LaFollette you know gained his popularity by posing as a friend of the poor down-trodden people, making a special effort in bringing the railroads to time. He was hailed as a reformer and held up as a model for other statesmen. In fact up to within the last few weeks he did look like the real goods, enough so that he commands $250 for every lecture. It should be kept in mind and not forgotten, however, that with all his wind-jamming, and all his claims to look after "God's patient poor" that Senator LaFollette voted against the amendments to reduce the tariff on lumber and paper. There is a reason for this of course and perhaps the senator will make an effort to explain. Please bear in mind, however, that Wisconsin is a large producer of lumber and paper. It is natural that the senator should be building his fences for the next senatorial campaign. He is just like all the others. They are loyal to the people so long as their own scalp is not in danger.

"I Told You So."

An old couple lived in the mountains of eastern Tennessee. He was ninety-five and she ninety. Their son, a man of seventy, died. As the old folks crossed the pasture to their cabin after the burial the woman noticed a tear roll down her husband's cheek. She patted him tenderly on the arm and said:
"Never mind, John; never mind. You know I always said we never would raise that boy."—Success Magazine.

Where is Your Hair?

In your comb? Why so? Is not the head a much better place for it? Better keep what is left where it belongs! Ayer's Hair Vigor, new improved formula, quickly stops falling hair. There is not a particle of doubt about it. We speak very positively about this, for we know. Does not change the color of the hair.

Formula with each bottle. Show it to your doctor. Ask him about it, then do as he says.

Indeed, the one great leading feature of our new Hair Vigor may well be said to be this—it stops falling hair. Then it goes one step further—it aids nature in restoring the hair and scalp to a healthy condition. Ask for "the new kind."

THE NEW COLONEL

How Grant Proved Himself to Be a Master of Men.

When Captain Grant, formerly of the regular army, was appointed colonel of an Illinois regiment in place of Colonel Goode, John A. Logan while escorting him to the camp said: "Colonel, the regiment is a little unruly. Do you think you can manage the boys?"
"I think I can," replied Grant.
Logan and McClernand, two congressmen, made patriotic speeches, and Logan, after a two hours' oration, led forward a quiet man in plain citizen's clothes, saying:
"Allow me to present to you your new commander, Colonel U. S. Grant."
"Most of the soldiers observed him for the first time," writes Hamlin Garland, from whose "Life of Grant" we have quoted. "They were astonished and disappointed." Grant looked like a grave country doctor. But he showed that he could manage the "unruly boys." There were loud calls: "Grant! Grant! A speech!" Their late colonel used to "orate" before them. The new colonel stepped two paces toward them and said in a clear, calm voice:
"Men, go to your quarters!"
If an eight inch shell had exploded in their ranks the "boys" would not have been more surprised, but they went to their quarters. There was that in the new colonel's voice which expressed command. The tone was not loud, but it was given with a clear cut inflection which showed him a master of men.
That evening at dress parade as he stepped to the center of the regiment, wearing no uniform save a pair of gray trousers with a stripe running down the outside seams and an old sword, the men jested in low voices about their new commander.
Colonel Goode, the late colonel, not infrequently used the daily parade as an occasion to make a speech, and the men expected one from Grant. The line officers advanced, and the adjutant saluted.
"A soldier's first duty is to learn to obey his commander. I shall expect my orders to be obeyed as exactly and as instantly as if we were on the field of battle."
That was all he said. As the men marched back to quarters a private asked: "What do they mean by sending down a little man like him to command this regiment? He can't pound dry sand in a straight hole."
"He can't make a speech. Look at the clothes he wears. Who is he anyhow?"
"Boys," retorted a sergeant, "I'll tell you who he is. He's the colonel of this regiment, as you'll find, and don't you forget it."
The sergeant was a prophet. The regiment had obtained all the liquor it wished for. Grant stopped that. A man resisted arrest.
"What's the matter?" asked Grant of the officer of the day.
"The man persists in bringing liquor into camp and refuses to give it up."
"Put him in the guardhouse."
"He refuses to go."
Grant stepped up to him, seized him by the collar and jerked him outside of the camp gate. "Get out of my regiment," he said. "You are not worth disciplining. If you come back I'll have you shot!" A big, dangerous man named Mexico was tied up with a score of others for leaving camp without permission. "For every minute I stand here I'll have an ounce of your blood," said he to the colonel.
"Gag him!" said Grant.
One by one as the hours passed the other offenders were released by the officers of the guard. Grant released Mexico himself. The bully saw that his colonel was his master, and the regiment began to find out that it had a colonel.

The Rich Uncle.
He (desperately)—Tell me the truth. Is it not my property that stands between us?
She (sadly)—Yes.
He (with a ray of hope)—I admit that I am poor, and so, unfortunately, is my father, but I have an aged uncle who is very rich and a bachelor. He is an invalid and cannot long survive.
She (delightedly)—How kind and thoughtful you are! Will you introduce me to him?—New York Week.

COMMUNICATION:—To the fathers, mothers, and citizens of Genoa and vicinity in general:

I haven't the time to come to your city, put up at your hotel, and spend two weeks "knocking" my incorporated school competitors; neither have I a desire to do so. I only ask you to read the above endorsement by the Elgin banks of the Ellis Business College, which is now in its 10th year in Elgin. It has just placed 20 of its graduates in good salaried positions, among whom is one of Genoa's young men who completed our shorthand course in 4½ months.

I am an Elgin member, in good standing, of four of the oldest fraternal orders in the world. Do the citizens of Genoa believe that these time honored orders, and the cashiers of the Elgin banks would tolerate such a man as the corporation school man has represented the principal of the Ellis Business College to be, in his endeavor to tear down the Ellis school, that he may feed the spoils to the greedy corporation monopoly school which he represents?

We invite the people of Genoa and vicinity to investigate, and then if they find the words of the cashiers of Elgin's banks to be reliable, and if they believe in supporting the single individual enterprise (all things being equal) in preference to the incorporated monopoly, then they should encourage the Ellis Business College which has made a record during the past ten years that is a credit to Elgin and its patrons.

A gang of gypsies were camped near Genoa Monday but the reception here was too cool and they soon pulled out. The story of the "gypsy queen" does not go these days. They are simply a pack of greasy vagabonds and should be kept moving at all times.

Owing to repeated attacks made upon the character and methods of the principal of the Ellis Business College of Elgin by a representative of another Elgin school, the item under the heading of "Elgin Banks Endorse Ellis Business College" on page 5, will no doubt prove of much interest to our readers.

Boy wanted—to learn the printer's trade. We want a boy who has at least a grammar school education, or has finished the eighth grade, not less than 16 years of age. We do not want a cigarette fiend. This is a good chance for some young man to learn a good trade in all its details. We are not looking for an angel, but a boy who means business and wants to prepare himself for the future. If you want to learn a trade and are in dead earnest about the matter call at the Republican-Journal office at once.

Firm Changes Hands

The firm of Kellogg & Adams has been dissolved, the former now being sole owner of the business conducted for years by that well known firm. Mr. Kellogg will continue the business with a much finer and larger stock of goods in all lines. Hutch was in Chicago several days this week selecting a large car load of the famous Staver buggies which will be shipped next week. Now all who are looking for bargains can do no better than give Hutch a chance. He has sold Staver buggies for 20 years and has tried nearly every other make in the country. The Staver however has always given the best satisfaction to seller and customer. There is a satisfying guarantee behind every Staver buggy too. Hutch has made a big reduction on all harness, whips, nets, dust-ers and lap robes.

Interesting Meet at Genoa's New Half Mile Track

The managers of the new half mile track have arranged for an interesting race meet next Tuesday, Aug. 24. The track is in excellent condition and there is no reason why the events should not be good ones. Some good entries are expected in all the events which will be pulled off as follows: 1st race—2:35 pace or trot, 5 to enter, 4 to start. Purse $100.00. 2nd race—Three year old colt race, pace or trot. Purse $30.00. Mile heats, two in three. 3rd race—Running race, open to all. Purse $5.00.

There will be a harness horse exhibition, open to all, with a cash prize for the finest single hitch. A ladies' equestrian exhibition is also scheduled, a prize being offered.

Mrs. Winters Dead

Mrs. Isaac Winters, 82 years of age, mother of Charles Winters of this city, died at her home in Belvidere Thursday at 11 p. m., after an illness of a year, the last two months of which were spent in bed. Old Lim Jucklin, the young bridegroom, the bride and Mrs. Jucklin were gathered together discussing connubial bliss from a modern and ancient standpoint, respectively.

"The experiment of every wedding is the husband," he remarked, looking at the young man. "No matter how wise he may be, how good a judge of a horse and the weather, something altogether different arises in his life when he takes unto himself a wife. He thinks she is the simple rule of three, but before long he finds out that she is all mathematics, with a side light that dazzles but don't explain astronomy."

Mrs. Jucklin spoke up. "Limuel, what are you trying to get at? You would have it appear that a woman is something not to be understood."

"Oh, no; she is perfectly plain and so is sunshine, but nobody can't pick it up and examine it to his own satisfaction. Woman's all right. It's the graciously been presented to her. And the sweetest of all territories is the enjoyment of the spare time of her husband. She finds her mellowest pleasure in his society, and can't very well understand why she doesn't supply his every want. He has told her time and again that she did. But there comes a time when he wants to stay out a night, to sniff the air of his former reckless freedom. It's his nature. It was her nature as an obedient daughter to stay at home at night. And when she finds that she hasn't been strong enough to remodel his nature she grieves in her soul.

"Many a night I've sat up waitin' for you," said Mrs. Jucklin.

"Yes, but I came, didn't I?"

"Yes," she admitted, "but at what time?"

"Oh, I didn't have to keep track of the time. But I want to say to Billie that stayin' out at night is one of the worst habits a man can fall into. It young husband that I'm gettin' at—If I can. Marriage is a time when a mote gets into the eye of all experience. Things are looked at through winks—half light and half dark; makin' a sort of twilight for the soul; and in the golden-dusk everything looks different from what it really is. Marriage was made to protect woman, and havin' been cut out for her like a garment, it fits her."

Marriage is the Time When a Mote Gets into the Eye of All Experience.

"But don't it fit a man, too?" the bride timidly inquired.

"Yes, my dear, with a takin' in here and a bitin' out there," the old man replied. "The man is the one that has to be tamed. He has to be broke in and made bridelike, like a colt. With marriage is an end; with her a beginnin'." Do you follow me?"

"No, I'm afraid not," said the bride.

"I thought not. But what do you think, Billie?" This was addressed to the bridegroom.

"Don't know exactly. All I know is I love Sallie and will always love her," and the pretty eyes of the bride with silent music sang out, "now there."

"I don't doubt that," said the old man. "But the mornin' sun is a shinin' on you now and the noontime of trial hasn't come. But it will come.

is the dark side of married life. No matter how truthful a man may have started out, it makes him more or less a liar. Midnight and the truth ain't twins. And a man hasn't reformed when he cusses himself for bein' a fool. The wisest man feels he is a fool when he stays out too late. There ain't no reproach more fetchin' than to see the moon fadin' away in the heavens. Of course, a man can't stay at home all the time. The fact is, I'll be hanged if I know what he is to do. I'm not talkin' about the saint, but the flesh-and-blood man. You may try all you please to make a hymn of life, but the first thing you know a jig tune pops up. So, Billie, when you catch yourself inclined to whistle too many of the jigs, stop and ask yourself if they pay in the long run. I don't mean that you should be serious. Nothin' is gained by bein' solemn. David is remembered as well for havin' danced before the ark as for some of his psalms wherein he wanted the Lord to wipe out a whole lot of folks. Have all the fun you can, but recollect it ain't the healthiest fun if you have to lie about it to your wife. The old idea that a man is excusable for lyin' to his wife ain't a good one. When

"Many a Time I've Sat Up Waitin' for You," Said Mrs. Jucklin.

This beautiful book you now possess is shown to you only a page at a time. You can't turn over the leaves and look at the pictures of the future. The plot must come to you a line at a time. The fact is, you've got to draw your own pictures for the book. Some of them will be painted and some made with charcoal.

"I wish the wagon would come," spoke up the bridegroom, glancing through the window.

"Yes, we start out a waitin' for the wagon," replied the old man.

"And we end silently lying within its gloomy precincts," said the old minister.

"Gracious me!" exclaimed Mrs. Jucklin, "are they goin' to preach a funeral right here?"

Old Limuel laughed. "I'm not. I'm just tryin' to give Billie, there, a little bit of advice. And as I was goin' to remark, I don't know of anything that stands more in need of common sense than marriage—the young husband, I might say. He is as raw as unspiced cotton. He begins by yieldin' to every persuasion and after a while rebels against himself. A woman never understands why she should surrender a territory that has you have led, and she has caught you, I am not at all certain that a generous acknowledgment will pay. And yet if you stick to it a long time must pass before you can live it down. A woman's memory is like the sun—it rises fresh every mornin'. Sometimes a simple lie is a finger-board pointin' toward the courthouse where they keep divorces. A woman may admire a man because he's a good dancer, but in her heart she loves truth and honor. So, be as truthful as you can, and when you find that you have exhausted your stock ask her to help you to replenish it. Make a distress of your scarcity of truth and she will be pleased to nurse it. It will do her good. Marriage may start out as a picnic, you know, but a picnic has its cold victuals. To sum the whole thing up, do the best you can. Be patient. Remember that you are a man and that the foot of a man is nearly always on the verge of slippin'. And when it has slipped put it back with as little noise as possible. Tell the truth just as often as you can, and you will find it an investment that draws compound interest in gold."

WHERE TO KEEP THE PISTOL.

Burglar Who Has Been Long in the Business Hands Out a Little Good Advice.

I take my pen in hand to write you an answer to the mug that signs his name "Victim" what says that a bolt on your bedroom door nights will make you safe from burglars coming into the room and shooting your head off and to tell him the only way to be safe from harm by burglars is to lay still when they tells you to and after they has gone to collect from the burglary insurance company.

Your man "Victim" is a dull guy if he thinks a bolt will stop any one that knows his trade, because we always puts a gilet hole through the panel right back of the bolt and slides it back quiet and easy just the same way as we puts holes through the panel back of dead latches on outside doors, because there ain't nothin' will stop a man that knows his trade only a steel door with an iron crossbar back of it and electric contacts all round.

What's more is that any man that sleeps with a pistol under his pillow is a chump, because that's where we always feels for it the first thing and gets it before proceeding to the bustness of the evening, the right place to keep a pistol being in the front hall hanging on a nail where you ain't liable to do no damage to the bedroom walls and furniture with it, besides its bein' bad for nervous people to wake up in the night and feel for a pistol that ain't there no more.

If a guy wants to take a pistol to bed with him and thinks he's got nerve enough to use it the proper place for it is not under the pillow, because that's where we always looks for it, but its at the foot of the bed, about where you can stretch out with your toes so that when you wake up and feel the burglar's hand searching under your pillow you can lay still till he moves over to the bureau, when you will have plenty of time to get hold of your gun with your toes and pull it up gentle and slow like you was still fast asleep till you get your grip on it, and then if you are quick enough to make the burglar shoot in the smoke all right, but if you ain't got the nerve for the job you'd better not have no guns around, because he will shoot next.

Having been in the bolt slipping and pillow pistol collecting line for nine years, I guess I know the game, and if I knowed where your mug "Victim" lives I would just come up some evening and pinch his gun for him to show him his bolt is no good.—Sloppy Mike.

Free and Easy in Frisco.

"There is probably no city in the world where all classes meet on such free and easy terms as San Francisco, and a social state of affairs which has probably descended from the old mining days, and this haphazard equality is seldom appreciated by the British tourist, who passes through here on his out-and-dried tour round the world.

"I remember once sitting in the entrance hall of the Palace, with a well-known racing man and privileged joker, known as 'White Hat Macarthy,' when a gorgeously apparelled young Englishman, just landed from a Japan liner, walked up to the office to register, while his private servant respectfully looked on. When they had disappeared to inspect their apartments, Macarthy strolled up to the desk, glanced at the register book, and while the clerk's back was turned inscribed something on its open page, and waving me a farewell left the hotel.

"Curiosity impelled me to inspect the volume, and this is what I read: 'The Honble. Archibald James Fitz-Alan and valet,' while underneath it, in my racing friend's somewhat cramped and shaky handwriting, appeared the following entry: 'Mr. White Hat Macarthy and valet!'"

Quaint Injunction in Will.

The quaint testamentary injunction of an eighteenth century gardener and botanist was observed for the one hundred and eightieth successive year at Shoreditch parish church, says the London Standard, when what is known as the "vegetable lecture," was preached by the vicar, Rev. E. R. Ford. In 1729 Thomas Fairchild died at the age of 63 years, and bequeathed £25 to the church wardens of Shoreditch, stipulating that the interest should be paid each Whit Tuesday for the delivery by a selected preacher of an address on "The wonderful works of God in creation, or the certainty of the resurrection of the dead by certain changes of the animal and vegetable forms of the creation." Fairchild had extensive grounds in the days when "the Hoxton hamlet" was noted for its productions, and he introduced many varieties of foreign fruits and flowers. In the borough council's small public garden in Hackney road, close to the church, there is a tombstone recording the injunction as to the lecture.

COMMERCIAL CONGRESS ON IMPORTANT QUESTION UP

Denver Entertains Trans-Mississippi Meeting—Twentieth Session of Organization.

Denver, Col., Aug. 16.—After a lapse of 18 years the Trans-Mississippi Commercial congress re-convened to-day in this city, where it held its second meeting in 1891. Its sessions will last all through the week and many are the vital subjects that will be discussed. Only politics is barred, and the program is so elastic that any delegate may talk about the subject that interests him most.

Secretary Arthur F. Francis was busy all morning greeting the hundreds of delegates. They include representatives of states, cities, chambers of commerce, boards of trade, commercial clubs, manufacturing, mining, mercantile and traffic, live stock, immigration, irrigation, maritime, drainage and waterways improvement associations.

President Thomas F. Walsh of Denver called the opening session to order in the Auditorium. It was given up mainly to welcoming speeches and responses and an outline of what the congress hoped to talk about and to accomplish.

Among the important matters up for careful consideration is the question of closer commercial relations with the Latin republics, with special reference to the early completion of the Panama canal. Director Barrett of the International Bureau of American Republics is here with representatives of the Latin-American legations to take a hand in this discussion. Hawaii, too, is represented by delegates who will ask for vigorous action on behalf of immigration and public land laws.

"National Defense" has a place on the program because of the pressing necessities of the Pacific coast in the matter of adequate naval facilities, and the question of a liberal policy toward the merchant marine also is on the list.

Of course conservation of the forests and the public domain will attract much attention, and it is expected the resulting discussions will be lively. Irrigation, waterways, drainage, dry-farming, parcels post, postal savings banks and many other topics are to be threshed out by the speakers before the congress.

GAY TIME FOR HOTEL MEN

Their Northwestern Association Convenes in Omaha for Three Days of Business and Pleasure.

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 16.—Seldom has Omaha entertained a livelier and happier lot of men and women than those who have come for the annual convention of the Northwestern Hotel Men's association. The men have a good deal of business to attend to, and began it this afternoon, but neither they nor their wives will overlook any opportunities for a jolly time during the three days of the convention. The fun begins this evening, when the men will witness an initiation of the Knights of Ak-Sar-Ben and the women will have an automobile ride. Tomorrow, after the business sessions, the visitors will go in automobiles to Council Bluffs and Lake Manawa. On Wednesday there will be more auto rides and the convention will close with a big banquet.

SOLID GOLD & SILVER AWARD

For the Best Ear of Corn

To be Known as the W. K. Kellogg National Corn Trophy

To be Awarded at the National Corn Exposition, Omaha, December 6 to 18, 1909.

Over one hundred thousand million (100,000,000,000) ears of corn were grown in the United States last year. Over a billion dollars were paid for them. More than a million and a quarter extra dollars went into the pockets of the farmers for corn this year than they received for the previous year's crop.

The reason for this may be found in the fact that the people of the United States are beginning to learn how delicious corn is and to realize its full food value.

Kellogg's Toasted Corn Flakes has placed corn among the indispensable items of daily fare. The makers, therefore, are interested in the development of the King of Cereals, and have decided to award a beautiful trophy for the man, woman or child who can produce the best ear of corn in two different seasons.

Professor Holden, of the Iowa State College, the greatest authority on corn in the world, will award the prize at the National Corn Exposition, to be held at Omaha, Neb., December 6th to 18th, 1909. Two single rules will govern the plan, and they are—that you send your best ear of corn to the National Corn Exposition, Omaha, Neb., before November 27, 1909; and that you are a member of the National Corn Association. Full particulars regarding which can be had by writing to National Corn Exposition, Omaha, Neb. Tie a tag securely to your specimen and word it. For the Kellogg Trophy Contest, and write your name and address plainly, if yours is judged the best, you will get the trophy for 1910. If you succeed again next year or the year following, the trophy will become your property for all time. In other words, you must produce the best ear of corn two different years.

There will be no restrictions. Any man, woman or child belonging to the Association can enter. It will be open to every state in the Union. Professor Holden will judge the corn particularly on the basis of quality. The growing of more corn per acre is one object of the award, but the main purpose of the founder of the trophy is for

She Dropped a Knife and Fork, and Sure Enough the Old Saying Came True.

The woman looked at the man and spoke confidently.

"Somebody's coming," she said. "I just dropped a knife and fork." The man smiled in a superior way.

"Rats," he said, brutally. "That's nothing. I believe you dropped several spoons and a bowl at the same time by the sound."

"All right," said the woman, "you'll see. Somebody's sure to come. To drop a knife means a man's coming, and a fork means a woman."

"And a spoon means children," said the man. "According to that a man and woman with half a dozen children are due—and the bowl—does that stand for a dog?" The woman ignored him.

The evening dragged on. The woman became distinctly uneasy and the man distinctly triumphant.

"I told you so," he said. "It's about bedtime—"

The man answered the bell, and into the hall poured a flood of people, led by a tall, austere lady in black, who spoke saying:

"There's been a fire over on Hill street and these poor people have no place to stay. How many will you take for the night?"

"Hey!" called the man to the woman who stood within the library curtains—"how many people can spend the night?"

"How many are there?" she inquired. The austere female answered:

"There are 13 men, 27 women and about 55 children. Of course you can't take—"

"You bet we can't," said the man, hastily. "Give us two of the children—that'll be about enough."

Half an hour later the woman rolled over on her pillow.

"When I dropped that knife and fork," she began.

"Never mind," said the man. "Let's don't talk about it. Suppose you'd dropped a dozen knives and forks."—Galveston News.

THE SECRET OF HAPPINESS.

Unselfishness in Life is the One Thing That Will Transform All Things to Gold.

The moment we set about the task of making every human being we come in contact with better for knowing us—more cheerful, more courageous and with greater faith in the kindness of God and man—that moment we begin to attain the third purpose of life—personal happiness.

Would you possess the magic secret of the alchemist which transforms all things to gold?

It is unselfishness—or, to use a better word, selflessness.

He who goes forth bent upon being always kind, always helpful, in the little daily events of life, will find all skies tinted with gold, all his nights set with stars and unexpected flowers of pleasure springing up in his pathway.

And all his tears shall turn into smiles.—Brooklyn Eagle.

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens with the shipwreck of the steamer on which Miss Genevieve Leslie, an American heiress, Lord Winthrop, an Englishman, and Tom Blake, a brusque American, were passengers. The three were tossed upon an uninhabited island and were the only ones not drowned. Blake recovered from a drunken stupor, Blake, shunned on the boat, because of his roughness, became a hero as preserver of the helpless pair. The Englishman was suing for the hand of Miss Leslie. Blake started to swim back to the ship to recover what was left. Blake returned safely. Winthrop wasted his last match on a cigarette, for which he was scolded by Blake. Their first meal was a dead fish.

"To be sure, the Japanese eat raw fish," admitted Winthrop. "Yes; and you'd swallow your share of it if you had an invite to a swell dinner in Tokyo. Go on now, both of you. It's no joke, I tell you. You've got to eat, if you expect to get to water before night. Understand? See that headland south? Well, it's 100 to 1 we'll not find water short of there, and if we make it by night, we'll be doing better than I figure from the looks of these bogs. Now go to chewing. That's it! That's fine, Miss Jenny!"

Miss Leslie had forced herself to take a nibble of the raw fish. The flavor proved less repulsive than she had expected, and its moisture was so grateful to her parched mouth that she began to eat with eagerness. Not to be outdone, Winthrop promptly followed her lead. Blake had already cut himself a second slice. After he had cut more for his companions, he began to look over with a closeness that proved embarrassing to Miss Leslie.

"Here's more of the good stuff," he said. "While you're chewing it, we'll sort of take stock. Everybody shell out everything. Here's my outfit—three shillings, half a dozen poker chips, and not another blessed—Say, what's become of that whisky flask? have you seen my flask?"

"Here it is, right beside me, Mr. Blake," answered Miss Leslie. "But it is empty."

"Might be worse! What you got?—hairpins, watch? No pocket, I suppose?"

"None; and no watch. Even most of my pins are gone," replied the girl, and she raised her hand to her loosely coiled hair.

"Well, hold on to what you've got left. They may come in for fish-hooks. Let's see your shoes."

Miss Leslie slowly thrust a slender little foot just beyond the hem of her dragged white skirt.

"Good Lord!" groaned Blake, "slippers, and high heels at that! How do you expect to walk in those things?"

"I can at least try," replied the girl, with spirit.

"Hobble! Pass 'em over here, Winthrop, my boy."

The slippers were handed over. Blake took one after the other and wrenched off the heel close to its base.

"Now you've at least got a pair of slippers," he said, tossing them back to their owner. "Tie them on tight with a couple of your ribbons, if you don't want to lose them in the mud. Now, Winthrop, what you got beside the knife?"

Winthrop held out a bunch of long flat keys and his cigarette case. He opened the latter and was about to throw away the two remaining cigarettes when Blake grasped his wrist.

"Hold on! even they may come in for something. We'll at least keep them until we need the case."

"And the keys?"

"Make arrow-heads, if we can get fire."

"I've heard of savages making fire by rubbing wood."

"Yes; and we're a long way from being savages—at present. All the show we have is to find some kind of quartz or flint, and the sooner we start to look the better. Got your slippers tied, Miss Jenny?"

"Yes; I think they'll do."

"Think! It's knowing the thing. Here, let me look."

The girl shrank back; but Blake stooped and examined first one slipper and then the other. The ribbons about both were tied in dainty bows. Blake jerked them loose and twisted them firmly over and under the slippers and about the girl's slender ankles before knotting the ends.

"There; that's more like. You're not going to a dance, he growled.

He thrust the empty whisky flask into his hip pocket and went back to pass a slung of reeds through the gills of the corymba.

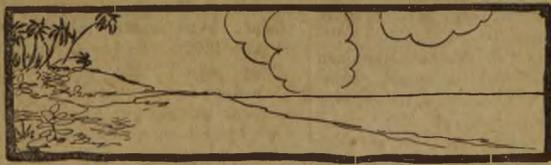

"All ready now," he called. "Let's get a move on. Keep my coat closer about your shoulders, Miss Jenny, and keep your shade up, if you don't want a sunstroke."

"Thank you, Blake, I'll see to that," said Winthrop. "I'm going to help Miss Leslie along. I've fastened our two shades together, so that they will answer for both of us."

"How about yourself, Mr. Blake?" inquired the girl. "Do you not find the sun fearfully hot?"

"Sure; but I wet my head in the sea, and here's another source."

As he rose with dripping head from beside the pool he slung the corymba on his back and started off without further words.

CHAPTER IV.

A Journey in Desolation.

MORNING was well advanced and the sun beat down upon the three with almost overpowering fierceness. The heat would have rendered their thirst unendurable had not Blake hacked off for them bit after bit of the moist corymba flesh.

In a temperate climate ten miles over firm ground is a pleasant walk for one accustomed to the exercise. Quite a different matter is ten miles across mud-flats, covered with a tangle of reeds and rushes, and frequently dipping into salt marsh and ooze. Before they had gone a mile Miss Leslie would have lost her slippers had it not been for Blake's forethought in tying them so securely. Within a little more than three miles the girl's strength began to fail.

"Oh, Blake," called Winthrop, for the American was some yards in the lead, "pull up a bit on that knoll. We'll have to rest a while, I fancy. Miss Leslie is about pegged."

"What's that?" demanded Blake. "We're not half-way yet!"

Winthrop did not reply. It was all he could do to drag the girl up on the hummock. She sank, half-fainting, upon the dry reeds, and he sat down beside her to protect her with the shade. Blake stared at the miles of swampy flats which yet lay between them and the out-jutting headland of gray rock. The base of the cliff was screened by a belt of trees; but the nearest clump of green did not look more than a mile nearer than the headland.

"Hell!" muttered Blake, despondently. "Not even a short four miles. Mush and sassify girls!"

Though he spoke to himself the others heard him. Miss Leslie flushed and would have risen had not Winthrop put his hand on her arm.

"Could you not go on and bring back a flask of water for Miss Leslie?" he asked. "By that time she will be rested."

"No; I don't fetch back any flasks of water. She's going when I go, or you can come on to suit yourselves."

"Mr. Blake, you—you won't go and leave me here! If you have a sister—if your mother—"

"She died of drink, and both my sisters did worse."

"My God, man! do you mean to say you'll abandon a helpless young girl?"

"Not a bit more helpless than were my sisters when you rich folks' guardians of law and order juggled me for the winter 'cause I didn't have a job and turned both girls into the street—onto the street, if you know what that means—one only 16 and the other 17. Talk about helpless young girls—Damnation!"

Miss Leslie cringed back as though she had been struck. Blake, however, seemed to have vented his anger in the curse, for when he again spoke there was nothing more than impatience in his tone. "Come on, now; get aboard. Winthrop couldn't lug you a half-mile, and long's it's the only way don't be all day about it. Here, Winthrop, look to the fish."

"But, my dear fellow, I don't quite take your idea, nor does Miss Leslie, I fancy," ventured Winthrop.

"Well, we've got to get to water or die; and as the lady can't walk she's going on my back. It's a case of have-to."

"No! I am not—I am not! I'd sooner die!"

"I'm afraid you'll find that easy enough later on, Miss Jenny. Stand by, Winthrop, to help her up. Do you hear? Take the knife and fish and lend a hand."

There was a note in Blake's voice that neither Winthrop nor Miss Leslie dared disregard. Though scarlet with mortification, she permitted herself to be taken pica-back upon Blake's broad shoulders and meekly obeyed his command to clasp her hands about his throat. Yet even at that moment, such as the inconsistencies of human nature, she could not but admire the ease with which he rose under her weight.

Now that he no longer had the slow pace of the girl to consider, he advanced at his natural gait, the quick, tireless stride of an American railroad surveyor. His feet, trained to swamp travel in Louisiana and Panama, seemed to find the firmest ground as by instinct, and whether on the half-dried mud of the hummocks or in the ankle-deep water of the bogs, they felt their way without slip or stumble.

Winthrop, though burdened only with the half-eaten corymba, toiled along behind, greatly troubled by the mud and the tangled reeds, and now and then flung down by some unlucky misstep. His modish suit, already much damaged by the salt water, was soon smeared afresh with a coating of greenish slime. His one consolation was that Blake, after jerking at his first tumble, paid no more attention to him. On the other hand, he was cut by the seeming indifference of Miss Leslie. In spite of his own misery, he failed to consider that the girl might be suffering far greater discomfort and humiliation.

More than three miles had been covered before Blake stopped on a hummock. Releasing Miss Leslie, he stretched out on the dry crest of the knoll and called for a slice of the fish. At his urging the others took a few mouthfuls, although their throats were so parched that even the moist flesh afforded scant relief. Fortunately for them all, Blake had been thoroughly trained to endure thirst. He rested less than ten minutes; then taking Miss Leslie up again like a rag doll, he swung away at a good pace.

The trees were less than half a mile distant when he halted for the second time. He would have gone to them without a pause, though his muscles were quivering with exhaustion, had not Miss Leslie chanced to look around and discover that Winthrop was no longer following them. For the last mile he had been lagging farther and farther behind, and now he had suddenly disappeared. At the girl's dismayed exclamation, Blake released his hold and she found herself standing in a foot or more of mud and water. The sweat was streaming down Blake's face. As he turned around, he wiped it off with his shirt-sleeves.

"Do you—can it be, Mr. Blake, that he has had a sunstroke?" asked Miss Leslie.

"Sunstroke? No; he's just laid down, that's all. I thought he had more sand—confound him!"

"But the sun is so dreadfully hot, and I have his shade."

"And he's been tumbling into every other pool. No; it's not the sun. I've half a mind to let him lie—the paper-legged swell! It would no more than square our aboard-ship accounts."

"Surely, you would not do that, Mr. Blake! It may be that he has hurt himself in falling."

"In this mud?—bah! But I guess I'm in for the pack-mule stunt all around. Now, now; don't yowl, Miss Jenny. I'm going. But you can't expect me to love the snob."

As he splashed away on the return trail, Miss Leslie dabbed at her eyes to check the starting tears.

"Oh, dear—Oh, dear!" she moaned; "what have I done to be so treated? Such a brute. Oh, dear!—and I am so thirsty!"

In her despair she would have sunk down where she stood had not the sliminess of the water repelled her. She gazed longingly at the trees, in the fore of which stood a grove of stately palms. The half-mile seemed an insuperable distance, but the ride on Blake's back had rested her and thrust goaded her forward.

Stumbling and slipping she waded on across the inundated ground, and came out upon a half-baked mud-flat, where the walking was much easier. But the sun was now almost directly overhead, and between her thirst and the heat she soon found herself faltering. She tottered on a few steps farther, and then stopped, utterly spent. As she sank upon the dried rushes she glanced around and was vaguely conscious of a strange, double-headed figure following her path across the marsh. All about her became black.

The next she knew Blake was splashing her head and face with brackish water out of the whisky flask. She raised her hand to shield her face, and sat up, sick and dizzy.

"That's it!" said Blake. He spoke in a kindly tone, though his voice was harsh and broken with thirst. "You're all right now. Pull yourself together and we'll get to the trees in a jiffy."

"Mr. Winthrop?"

"I'm here, Miss Genevieve. It was only a wretched ankle. If I had a stick, Blake, I fancy I could make a go of it over this drier ground."

"And lay yourself up for a month. Come, Miss Jenny, brace up for another try. It's only a quarter-mile, and I've got to pack him."

The girl was gasping with thirst; yet she made an effort, and assisted by Blake, managed to gain her feet. She was still dizzy; but as Blake swung Winthrop upon his back, he held her to take hold of his arm. Winthrop held the shade over her head. Thus assisted, and sheltered from the direct beat of the sun-rays, she tottered along beside Blake, half-unconscious.

Fortunately the remaining distance lay across a stretch of bare dry ground, for even Blake had all but reached the limit of endurance. Step by step he labored on, staggering under the weight of the Englishman and gasping with a thirst which his exertions rendered even greater than that of his companions. But through the trees and brush which stretched away inland in a wall of verdure he had caught glimpses of a broad stream and the hope of fresh water called out every ounce of his reserve strength.

At last the nearest palm was only a few paces distant. Blake clutched Miss Leslie's arm and dragged her forward with a rush in a final outburst of energy. A moment later all three lay gasping in the shade. But the river was yet another 100 yards distant. Blake waited only to regain his breath; then he staggered up and went on. The others, unable to rise, gazed after him in silent misery.

Soon Blake found himself rushing through the jungle along a broad trail pitted with enormous footprints; but he was so near mad with thirst that he paid no heed to the spoor other than to curse the holes for the trouble they gave him. Suddenly the trail turned to the left and sloped down a low bank into the river. Blind to all else, Blake ran down the slope and dropping upon his knees plunged his head into the water.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Faith and Hope.

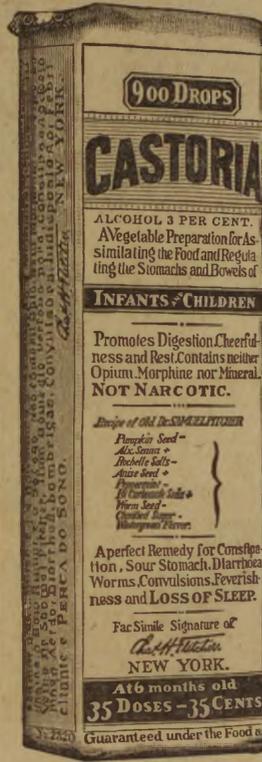

Mayme—if you don't love him why are you going to marry him?

Maybelle—Oh, I expect to love him after we are married. He has promised that on the morning of our wedding day he will shave off his dinky little French beard.

What is Castoria.

CASTORIA is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. It cures Diarrhoea and Wind Colic. It relieves Teething Troubles, cures Constipation and Flatulency. It assimilates the Food, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. The children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. F. Gerald Blattner, of Buffalo, N. Y., says: "Your Castoria is good for children and I frequently prescribe it, always obtaining the desired results."

Dr. Gustave A. Eisenbrauer, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "I have used your Castoria repeatedly in my practice with good results, and can recommend it as an excellent, mild and harmless remedy for children."

Dr. E. J. Dennis, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have used and prescribed your Castoria in my sanitarium and outside practice for a number of years and find it to be an excellent remedy for children."

Dr. S. A. Buchanan, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have used your Castoria in the case of my own baby and find it pleasant to take, and have obtained excellent results from its use."

Dr. J. E. Simpson, of Chicago, Ill., says: "I have used your Castoria in cases of colic in children and have found it the best medicine of its kind on the market."

Dr. R. E. Eskildson, of Omaha, Neb., says: "I find your Castoria to be a standard family remedy. It is the best thing for infants and children I have ever known and I recommend it."

Dr. L. R. Robinson, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria certainly has merit. Is not its age, its continued use by mothers through all these years, and the many attempts to imitate it, sufficient recommendation? What can a physician add? Leave it to the mothers."

Dr. Edwin F. Pardee, of New York City, says: "For several years I have recommended your Castoria and shall always continue to do so, as it has invariably produced beneficial results."

Dr. N. B. Sizer, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I object to what are called patent medicines, where maker alone knows what ingredients are put in them, but I know the formula of your Castoria and advise its use."

KINGSTON NEWS

FRED P. SMITH, CORRESPONDENT

Mrs. Mary Hadfield returned to her home in Oak Park Saturday after several weeks' visit with her sister, Mrs. Benson.

Mrs. Edith Brewer and children came from Rockford last week to be guests of her mother, Mrs. Nancy Scott.

Mrs. Ira Bicksler is home from her Iowa visit. John Martin of Genoa spent Sunday at R. C. Benson's. Earl Colvin returned Monday morning from North Dakota. Earl Moyers left Monday evening for a trip through the West. Rev. J. M. Skerry returned Tuesday from a visit at his home in New Jersey. Ask S. S. Slater, the Genoa furniture dealer, about having your furniture upholstered.

Mrs. D. S. McDonald is on the sick list. Mrs. Joseph O'Brien and son, Harry, returned to their home in Chicago last week Thursday. Col. L. H. Whitney of Chicago spent a few days with his sisters, Mesdames Bell, Scott and Dockham. The ladies of the Baptist church served ice cream on the lawn at John Rubach's Wednesday evening. A goodly number attended the social.

Ray Helsdon was in Savanna Tuesday. The third daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. William Armbruster Thursday morning of last week. Roy Brown of Rockford spent last Saturday evening and Sunday with his sister, Miss May B. Taylor. Mrs. C. S. Phelps entertained the W. C. T. U. Wednesday afternoon. The county president, Mrs. Carter, was present. Mr. and Mrs. Will Seward came recently from Iowa in their auto to spend a week with her sister, Mrs. Nellie Dibble, and husband. Mrs. H. G. Burgess, Miss Gladys Burgess and friend, Miss Loretta Laney of Chicago, spent Tuesday in Belvidere and Rockford. Miss Lena Bacon left Wednesday morning for Elgin where she has accepted a position in the dial department of the watch factory. Raymond Ackley was out from Chicago last Saturday evening and Sunday at the home of his grandparents, Postmaster and Mrs. A. E. Hix. Rev. W. H. Tuttle performed the ceremony last Friday evening at his home uniting the lives of Harry Allison of Belvidere and Miss Bertha Hyser of Rockford. Mrs. Ed Brown came from Valley Junction, Wis., Monday to remain sometime with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Bacon. Her husband will join her in a few weeks. C. A. Anderson and sister entertained their aunt, Mrs. Nelson of Aurora, last week. Miss Anderson accompanied her home last Saturday afternoon to attend ehautauqua. Wilbur Phelps and sisters, Mabel and Gertrude, of Rantoul, who have been guests of relatives at Garden Prairie and Herbert, came Tuesday for a visit at the home of their cousin, C. S. Phelps. A large number of our people left Wednesday for Camp Epworth where they will camp for ten days. There will be services in the M. E. church Sunday, Aug. 22, but the last Sunday of camp meeting there will be no services. A number from here attended the concert given by the young ladies' quartet under the auspices of the Davis Ladies Aid Society in the Davis & Reed hall, Herbert, Tuesday evening. Miss Grace Benson sang a number of solos and Miss Florence Pratt gave several readings. The gasoline car run by M. Malana and his section men of Genoa jumped the track because of an open derail near the tower Wednesday morning. One Italian was badly cut on the head. The car was running at a speed of 20 miles an hour. A company of thirty-five friends composed of members of the M. E. Aid Society and the young ladies of the town and vicinity gave Miss May Taylor a "linen shower" at the residence of Mrs. Hattie Landis Monday evening. Instrumental solos were given by Miss Loretta Lamey of Chicago. The young ladies' quartet of this place sang selections appropriate to the occasion. Miss Taylor's marriage to Dr. E. C. Burton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Burton of this place, occurred on Wednesday evening, Aug. 18, at the M. E. parsonage, Rev. W. H. Tuttle performing the ceremony.

INSPECT COUNTRY SCHOOLS
Diplomas Will be Given to Schools Found up to Standard
Beginning the first of September, the Superintendent of Public Instruction will begin a systematic inspection of country schools. A pamphlet will be issued setting forth what is regarded as a standard one-room school. Detailed information will be given as to physical equipment, course of study, organization, government and instruction. This will be sent to all who can make use of it. On invitation of the county superintendent a representative of the state office will visit the schools named by the county superintendent. If they are found to be up to the standard a diploma will be issued to the school. If it is not up to the standard short comings will be pointed out and when these have been made good the diploma will be issued. Each month the schools certified will be published in the Press Bulletin. At the end of a year a pamphlet will be issued giving detailed information with photographs of all the standard one-room schools.
